U. S.-France Sign Treaty, End Disputes Over Trade

Reciprocal Agreement Is Concluded by Hull, De Laboulaye.

Is Thirteenth Pact Of Administration

Barriers Between Nations Lifted; May 15 Was Deadline.

By Sidney Olson.

The United States concluded reciprocal trade agreement negotiations with its fifth best customer, France, late yesterday.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Andre de Laboulaye, Ambassador of France, signed the pact, thirteenth of the reciprocal trade agreements initiated in the Roosevelt Administration.

The agreement, second only in trade importance to that with Canada, surpassed it in international implications. Only last week, at the United States Chamber of Commerce conference, Secretary Hull warned of "the rising danger of a new world catastrophe" if trade barriers were not breached by such means as the reciprocal agreements.

Ends Series of Quarrels.

The pact will settle, it was confidently predicted, the long series of minor but annoying quarrels over commerce between the two nations since the World War. In pressing for successful conclusion of the long and technical negotiations, President Roosevelt some time ago set May 15 as the last date on which France could receive the benefits of reduced duties granted other nations in previous pacts.

Officials said that if France had not moved by that date to lift its trade barriers against this country French imports would have been assessed the entire amount of existing tariffs instead of receiving the present most-favored-nation treatment under present pacts with other nations.

Significance commercially of the pact is illustrable by a comparison of export-import figures for 1929 and 1935 for the two nations.

Balance Favors U. S.

In the boom year United States exports to France totaled $265,501,895, dropping in 1934 to $115,706,658 and last year gaining slightly to $116,920,014.

Imports by this country from France amounted to $171,485,155 in 1929, to $57,326,673 in 1934 (representing imports for consumption) and rising slightly in 1935 to $58,614,610.

The 60 per cent drop in exports and the 33 per cent drop in imports were severe blows to American foreign trade. Trade relations have been somewhat delicate during the steady decline in depression years, informed sources pointed out.

The agreement signed yesterday therefore was hailed as extremely gratifying by both sides. It is the first commercial pact with France in many years, and some State Department officials could not offhand remember of any other such agreement in Franco-American history.

Will Protect Commerce.

Secretary Hull said:

"It will provide improved opportunities for the expansion of trade in products of special interest to each country, and will enable the commercial interests concerned to develop these opportunities without fear of the sudden and unforeseen changes to which they are exposed in the absence of such an agreement. In addition to duty concessions and quota increases by France and duty concessions by the United States on carefully selected lists of products, the agreement provides in general for substantial most-favored-nation treatment by each country of the commerce of the other."

The agreement will come into force on June 15, of this year, it was announced, and will continue in force until July 1, 1937, and "indefinitely thereafter, subject to termination by either country on six months' notice."

The text, about which interest is high in trade circles, will be made public simultaneously in Washington and Paris on May 13.

Thirteenth Under 1934 Act.

Under the Reciprocal Trade Act of 1934, yesterday's treaty was the thirteenth to be concluded, others having been concluded with Cuba, Brazil, Belgium, Haiti, Sweden, Canada, The Netherlands, Switzerland, Colombia, Honduras, Nicaragua and Guatemala.

Pacts for which negotiations are now under way include those with Costa Rica, Salvador, Spain, Finland and Italy. It is understood that negotiations are proceeding rapidly with Finland, of this group, and least successfully with Italy.

Although contents were still secret, it is believed in some quarters that the terms will show the French have agreed to take larger amounts of this country's agricultural produce, with the list ranging from apples, pears and nuts to tobacco and perhaps cotton.

The leading commodities in United States exports to France have been unmanufactured cotton, petroleum products and refined copper. The principal imports from France have been luxury articles such as silk and silk garments, gloves, furs, precious stones, paintings and other works of art.

'Keep Hands Off Our Ethiopia,' Rome Warns Britain, France

But Il Duce Assures Powers Railroad and Lake Tana Rights Will Be Respected; Ready to Fight for 'Every Inch' of Conquered Area.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Paris, May 8.—Italy today served notice on France and Great Britain that Ethiopia henceforth must be regarded as Italian territory. At the same time Premier Benito Mussolini officially notified the Quai D'Orsay of three decisions:

1. Italy will respect French rights in Ethiopia.
2. Italy will respect British rights in the Lake Tana area.
3. Italy pledges that there will be no militarization of native Ethiopians.

Conveying Mussolini's decisions to the foreign office, the Italian Ambassador said:

"Hereafter Ethiopia is Italian territory. It will be defended by arms against whoever tries to take an inch of it."

Il Duce revealed through his envoy that there is no possibility of drafting peace terms on the basis of the Anglo-Franco-Italian Treaty of 1906, which recognized spheres of influence in Ethiopia, but also provided for Ethiopian independence.

Italy will not replace the fugitive Emperor Selassie, but each of the many Ethiopian tribes will remain autonomous. There will be no native Ethiopian army. Italian troops will assure adequate policing of the country. Italian arms in Ethiopia will be limited to the small force necessary to maintain order after the natives have been disarmed.

While France was learning of Italian aims the French ambassa-

Giant Zeppelin Heads for U. S.; 100 Are Aboard

Hindenburg Reported Over Holland on Start of Ocean Air Service.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin (Thursday), May 7.—The new German dirigible Hindenberg passed over Eindhoven, Netherlands, at 1:35 a. m. (8:35 p. m., Wednesday, Eastern standard time) on its maiden voyage to the United States. (Eindhoven is about 300 miles in a straight line from Friedrichshafen, the starting point of the Zeppelin.)

By the United Press.

Aboard the Dirigible Hindenburg, en Route to the United States, May 6.—The giant dirigible Hindenburg, pride of Nazi Germany, with more than 100 persons aboard, took off from Friedrichshafen tonight en route to the United States on her first north Atlantic crossing.

The ship soared away at 9:30 p. m. central European time (4:30 p. m. Eastern daylight time).

Searchlights played on the sides of the silvery craft and lighted the way as she nosed out toward the Atlantic to inaugurate the first air passenger, mail and freight service.

The Hindenburg took off in brilliant moonlight. The 49 passengers, including seven women and several journalists, leaned over the edge of the gondola and waved to the crowd until the landing field was out of sight.

Favorable weather was forecast for at least the first portion of the journey.

The Hindenburg took off immediately after the arrival by airplane of several bags of mail from Frankfort.

Eden Concedes League Failure In Africa War

Council Must 'Face the Facts' Monday, Asserts Secretary in Debate.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 6.—In a give-and-take debate in the House of Commons conflicting views on continued sanctions against Italy were expressed today, but the government, through Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, asserted the League "must go on."

Speaking before packed galleries, the young diplomat pledged that the government would "face the facts" of Geneva's failure to protect Ethiopia.

Eden studiously avoided, however, exposing the policy to be pursued by Britain at a meeting of the League Council Monday, except to say that action must be "collective."

Sir Austen Chamberlain, former foreign secretary, warned that continuance of sanctions now was a "policy of equal danger and futility."

In contrast, Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal, called for a declaration that sanctions will be increased and intensified. Laborite spokesmen asked for at least a continuance of the present economic and financial pressure against Italy.

From many sides of the house came support for a more effective League.

Eden disclosed that the government is entering consultations with the dominions over the problem raised by Italy's triumph in Africa.

"It is clear that the League of Nations must go on!" he asserted. "In the modern world, it is abso-

Woman Calms Den of Reptiles; Owner May Die of Adder Bite

By the United Press.

Montreal, May 6.—Florette Zoda, an Egyptian snake charmer, walked into a room filled with 12 ravenous, poisonous reptiles today and, one by one, put them back into their cages.

Her courage ended a panic that started when an adder bit Edward E. Smith, owner of a Schriever, La., snake farm, who had been starving the reptiles to make fighters out of them.

Smith, his left arm amputated below the elbow, was blind and unconscious in a hospital tonight. He will die unless the adder's venom coursing through his veins dissipates before it reaches the heart.

Smith had king cobras, rattlers and adders in his collection. He always had insisted that he was immune to snake bite and had been known to open his arteries and feed his blood to the snakes. Last night he was treating an adder for an ailment when the snake struck his left forearm. He rushed to a drug store and from there he was hurried to a hospital, where surgeons quickly amputated.

Police, at loss to know how to meet the menace, called in Miss Zoda, friend of Smith. They asked her to go into the room and exercise whatever power she had over the reptiles. Cautiously Miss Zoda pushed open the door in the room at the Alpine Hotel. Quickly she slammed it and turned away in horror.

She had been able to count only seven snakes, and she knew Smith had 12 in his collection.

Panic started. Police sealed the hotel room door and ordered everybody out of the Alpine. The street outside was blocked off. Patrolmen were equipped with special sticks and were ordered to poke into all crannies in the neighborhood in the

Girl Reporter Missing Week In Ethiopia

Eleanor Meade, of U. S., May Have Left on Train, Engert Says.

Rep. Rogers Denounces State Department, Requests Data.

An American newspaper woman, Miss Eleanor Meade, 30, of New York City, was reported missing in the razed and plundered city of Addis Ababa last night.

Minister Cornelius Van H. Engert told the State Department all other Americans but Miss Meade were accounted for. She is the Ethiopian correspondent of the Transradio Press Service, which yesterday informed the department it had heard nothing from Miss Meade for a week.

He said it was possible she may have taken one of the last trains out of Addis Ababa before the loot-crazed natives began their riotous pillaging of the abandoned town. In an emergency, it was held, she would not have had time to report her departure to the legation.

Miss Meade, born in Springfield, Mass., had more than 12 years' experience with New York newspapers before she went to Europe to do feature reporting for Transradio Press and Reuters, the English service.

Served Noted Beats.

She obtained the first telephone interview with Emperor Haile Selassie, now fleeing his conquered land, and was the first to interview the Empress. In New York she had been known for two exploits in particular, the securing of the first interview with the notorious postoffice robber and killer, Gerald Chapman, who also was a native of Springfield, and for an exposure of a Park avenue racket in which rich women were fleeced through offers of bogus movie contracts.

With the exception of Fay Gillis Wells, wife of the New York Herald-Tribune correspondent, Linton Wells, she was believed to have been the only American woman war correspondent in the war zone. The Wells' returned to this country several months ago.

Minister Engert, in re-occupying the bullet-battered Legation building, immediately began to check the list of Americans in the capital. All other Americans were reported safe, and all American property intact.

He added, however, that three women attaches of the Mary Hasties School, the Misses B. A. Dommermuth and L. M. Shippey of Avoca, Pa., and E. C. French of Avoca, N. Y., had lost their belongings to the looters.

The only American fatality in the rioting occurred last Sunday when Mrs. A. R. Stadin, of Loma Linda, Calif., wife of a doctor attached to the Seventh Day Adventists Mission, was killed by a stray bullet.

In the meantime, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, wife of the Representative who formulated the organic act resulting in the career system in the State Department, introduced a resolution in the House yesterday which called on Secretary of State Cordell Hull to produce the following data:

"1. Full and complete information as to what steps were taken by the Government of the United States to provide, in connection with the Italo-Ethiopian war, for the protection of the American Legation in Addis Ababa, and in connection with the recent looting of that city, for the protection of the lives of American citizens taking refuge in such legation, and Asks Copies of Correspondence.

"2. Copies of all communications between the Department of State and the American Minister in Addis Ababa in respect of such looting and in respect of any action taken or proposed or ordered to be taken in connection therewith."

Mrs. Rogers, in a short speech in the House, said:

"We knew for weeks and months there would be looting in Addis Ababa.

"We knew the people in our legation might be in danger. We had only four guards and they were natives.

"We could at least have had some machine guns or some trained men, as did the British.

"It is very humiliating that we had to appeal to the British for protection. We are grateful for the work of Mr. and Mrs. Engert and for that of the radio operators. If it had not been for the radio opera-

Miners, Operators Meet to Sign Pact

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 6.—After reaching an agreement which averted a suspension of the huge anthracite industry, operators and United Mine Workers met tonight to put their new contract in writing.

It was to control the wages, hours and other relations of 105,000 miners to employers in the $200,000,000-a-year Pennsylvania industry for the next two years.

When worded to mutual satisfaction, the pact was to be signed and then submitted to operators and union membership for ratification.

The six elected to draft it said they hoped to finish tonight. The union called another meeting of its 42-member full scale committee for tomorrow. It met today and unanimously approved the outlines of the agreement, the terms of which were not made public.

McDermott Gets Life in Wilson Case

Jury Deliberates Less Than 2 Hours to Decide on Verdict.

Sentencing Set Today; Second Trial Will Start at Once.

By Frederic B. Tuttle.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cumberland, Md., May 6.—Albert McDermott, alias John (Slim) Dunn, Alcatraz convict and former Tri-State gangster, escaped the gallows here today, when a jury in Allegany County Courthouse found him guilty of first-degree murder, without capital punishment, for the part he is alleged to have played in the "mistaken-identity" slaying of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route carrier.

The jury reached its verdict after deliberating 1 hour and 20 minutes.

Life imprisonment is mandatory and tomorrow Chief Justice D. Lindley Sloan will pronounce sentence. It is understood at this time McDermott's attorneys, Dorsey K. Offutt and Fuller Bernard, jr., will file a motion for a new trial.

McDermott showed no emotion when he learned the verdict.

McDermott was hastened from the courtroom, through the curious crowds that thronged the hallways, and taken to his cell in the Allegany County Jail.

Death Penalty Asked.

Less than two hours before the jury of businessmen and farmers returned its verdict, the 35-year-old gangster had heard State's Attorney James H. Pugh demand the death penalty.

"Slim Dunn is a murderer," declared Pugh in his half-hour address to the jury.

"He is a cold-blooded killer and he deserves no mercy."

The case was carefully summed up by Pugh as he addressed the jury.

He told of the plot to kill Mickey McDonald, which the State contended led to Wilson's death when gangland guns fired from behind a hedge in front of McDonald's home. Wilson was mistaken, in the darkness, for McDonald, the State charged.

John McDermott, young brother of the convicted man, was in court when the verdict was announced.

With McDermott's case disposed of, the State tomorrow will begin the trial of his alleged underworld associate, Albert Sutton.

Sutton, the State contends, was the man who was intrumental in plotting to "put the finger" on McDonald as a result of a gamblers feud.

Thomas Dawson, Maryland secretary of state, and F. Brook Whiting, Cumberland attorney, will represent Sutton.

As in McDermott's trial, State Attorney Pugh will ask for the death sentence.

5 Verdicts Possible.

In his instructions to the jury, Justice S. Lindley Sloan, presiding judge, said any one of five verdicts was possible, guilty of murder in the first degree, without recommendation for mercy; first degree without capital punishment, second degree, manslaughter or not guilty.

Pugh talked only half an hour, following the lengthy appeals of the defense attorneys, Dorsey K. Offutt and Fuller Barnard; who attacked the testimony of William Cleary, of Philadelphia, who turned State's evidence.

The testimony of Cleary, "confessed finger man" in the killing, was defended by Pugh. "It is necessary in a case of this kind to bring a man like Cleary in to testify. How else could we establish the background of this brutal crime?" Pugh demanded.

Criticizes Cleary.

The defense had held that Cleary's testimony was "uncorroborated," and criticized the man who was to have pointed out McDonald, the intended victim of the bullets that killed Wilson when he went to deliver a morning paper in front of the gambler's Takoma Park home.

Offutt took up the plea of the defense this afternoon. For more than two hours he addressed the jury. Bringing Cleary to testify against McDermott was unfair, he said.

In a surprise decision early this morning the defense rested its case without putting a single witness on the stand.

Filipino Prisoner Slashes 11, Is Killed by San Quentin Guard

By the Associated Press.

San Quentin Prison, Calif., May 6. Eleven prisoners were stabbed and one was hit by a richocheting bullet here today as an apparently crazed Filipino convict ran amok in a prison shed before a guard fatally shot him.

Three hundred other convicts fled screaming in terror before the Filipino and his self-fashioned weapon, made from a piece of fence wire.

The convict, Frank Dangne, serving a murder sentence from Santa Barbara, was killed by Guard Charles Rexroad, who said the man suddenly began slashing wildly with his crude knife.

None of the men wounded was in a serious condition, but three remained in the prison hospital. The remainder were treated for superficial wounds and given antitoxin.

While the convicts chatted in the crowded shed and yard, Guard Charles Rexroad paced up and down an elevated runway over their heads. When the outbreak occurred, he leveled his gun as the stabbed men screamed, but for several seconds could not risk a shot in the crowd. When the guard finally fired the Filipino began stabbing himself in the chest as he staggered and fell, the guard said.

House G. O. P. Starts Drive to Take Politics Out of Federal Relief

Treasury Figures Challenged As Former Aid Assails Tax Bill

G. O. May Tells Senate Finance Committee New Measure Is Both Dangerous and Unnecessary; Committee Hints Substantial Reductions.

By Robert C. Albright.

Challenging the Treasury's own tax computations, George O. May, wartime Treasury adviser and famous statistician, yesterday told the Senate Finance Committee that present taxes will raise virtually all of the revenue sought by the President from his highly controversial proposed tax on undistributed earnings.

May, head of Price, Waterhouse & Co., one of the largest accounting firms in the world, said Secrteary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., apparently had "misunderstood" figures before him when he said that $4,500,000,000 in corporate earnings would be available in 1936 for distribution to stockholders, under present laws.

Pointing out that this figure is in direct conflict with testimony of Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering, May declared:

"It is, I think, most unfortunate that the Secretary should have been permitted by his advisers to make * * * an obvious and serious misstatement of fact upon such an important question."

The New York accounting authority went further, and said the Treasury overestimated the increase in revenue likely to result from the proposed corporation taxes, had underestimated 1936 revenue yields, and had "exaggerated" the problem of tax avoidance.

Stressing the apparent discrepancy in the testimony of Morgenthau and Helvering, May said:

"The Secretary says that the $4,500,000,000 represents the sum available for distribution to stockholders under the existing law; the commissioner makes it clear that the repeal of the existing law is prerequisite to the existence of the $4,500,000,000. Under the existing law, according to the Treasury tables, approximately $1,100,000,000 of the $4,500,000,000 mentioned by the Secretary as being withheld

Plan for Amendment to Administration Bill Limits Authority.

States Would Get Aid Appointments

Democrats Due to Hold Caucus on Beiter's Earmarking Plan.

By Felix Bruner.

Republican members of the House in a conference last night agreed upon a plan to attempt to amend the Administration relief bill to provide that relief should be administered by non-partisan boards appointed by Governors and local officials rather than by Federal officials.

The bill will be recommended for passage today by the Appropriations Committee. The committee will recommend that Congress appropriate $1,425,000,000, a total of $75,000,000 less than that asked by President Roosevelt.

Tonight the first Democratic caucus of the session will be held to discuss the proposal, strongly opposed by the President, to earmark a part of the appropriation for the Public Works Administration, headed by Secretary Ickes.

Adequate Appropriation.

At the conclusion of the meeting of Republican House members, Minority Leader Snell gave out the following statement, which he said was the sense of the meeting, but not necessarily binding:

"We believe in an adequate appropriation for relief of the suffering and needy people in every community.

"We demand that the distribution of relief funds be immediately divorced from political control.

"We advocate that all relief funds as far as the Federal Government is concerned should be by grants to the several States and administered by nonpartisan committees in local communities.

"We believe this program of administering relief will save from 25 to 50 per cent of the present expenditures and result in more adequate and efficient relief of deserving citizens."

Loans Suggested.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt has suggested that municipal improvements, such as those demanded by the bloc asking for WPA earmarking, might be carried on with loans and grants from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, with employes supplied by the WPA doing the work. This suggestion was discussed by Representative Bankhead of Alabama, majority leader, following a talk with the President.

Efforts will be made to get quick action on the bill, in spite of opposition from both Democratic and Republican groups, with the expectation that it will be passed not later than next Monday.

The bill will follow the lines of last year's $4,880,000,0000 appropriation in providing that "not more than" certain sums shall be used for specified purposes. Among the sums specified is not more than $90,000,000 for the Resettlement Administration, headed by Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell. The Tugwell organization had hoped for $200,000,000.

Hopkins to Get Rest.

The remainder of the money will be turned over to Hopkins. Under the loose form of earmarking, he will have considerable latitude in transfering sums from one purpose to another.

The $75,000,000 cut in the appropriation is understood to have been for the purpose of offsetting the recent increase in the appropriation for the Civilian Conservation Corps, which was increased from $240,000,000 to $308,000,000.

In addition to relief, the appropriation bill will ask for $450,000,000 for setting up the social security organization and for carrying out its program. An appropriation for the Social Security Commission was killed in the last session when the late Senator Huey P. Long filibustered a deficiency bill to death.

Republican opposition is expected to take the form of demands for safeguards to prevent the money being used for political purposes. Representative Bacon (Republican), New York, said that he would introduce an amendment to provide that the money should be administered by bi-partisan boards appointed by the Governor of each State and by similar boards in

Rover G. O. P. Faction Plans Slate for Capital

Will Take Action Tonight Unless Truce Is Made With Colladay.

By Edward T. Folliard

Barring an unlooked-for truce, the majority faction in the Republican State Committee for the District of Columbia will elect a new national committeeman to succeed Edward F. Colladay tonight.

This faction, made up of 52 delegates, accuses Colladay of trying to "dominate" the local Republican organization.

A minority faction of 23 delegates is expected to choose Colladay for another four-year term as national committeeman.

The whole controversy is expected to land before the credentials committee of the Republican National Convention in Cleveland, next month. The committee, having made its decision in favor of one faction or the other, will pass that decision on to the convention itself.

Will Name Delegates.

Aside from the selection of a national committeeman and a national committeewoman, the principal business at tonight's meeting at the National Republican Club, Sixteenth street and Scott Circle, will be the election of the District's three delegates and three alternates to the Cleveland convention.

The indications are that two sets of delegates and alternates will be chosen, one by the majority faction and the other by the Colladay group.

Which set of delegates is to be seated will be decided by the credentials committee in Cleveland. That decision at the same time will determine who is to be the National Committeeman until 1940, since it is the seated delegates who nominate the committeeman from the convention floor.

Colladay Favors Landon.

Colladay, who has been national committeeman for the District for 19 years, is frankly in favor of Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas for the Republican Presidential nomination. He is a Kansan himself.

Those opposed to Colladay insist that their fight is not against Landon, but against Colladay for his attempts at domination. A majority of their faction, they say, is favorable to Landon.

If an uninstructed delegation is sent to Cleveland by them, these anti-Colladay Republicans say, it will be because that is the established custom in the District, and has been ever since Colladay has been national committeeman.

Fletcher Plans Big Celebration For Nominee

63 G. O. P. Delegates of Connecticut, California Are Unpledged.

By the Associated Press.

Plans for a giant outdoor notification ceremony for the next Republican Presidential nominee, to be staged in the Cleveland Municipal Stadium immediately after the June convention, were announced last night by the Republican National Committee.

Whether the plans are carried out, however, depends upon the wishes of the nominee, Henry P. Fletcher, national chairman, said in a statement. He added that in putting forward the proposal he was taking a leaf from the Democrats' book. Immediate notification ceremonies are planned in Franklin Field, Philadelphia, after the Democratic convention later in June. President Roosevelt accepted his 1932 nomination in the Chicago convention hall.

Another development last night was the issuing of a statement by Paul Block, newspaper publisher, proposing a coalition ticket of anti-New Dealers headed by Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, Republican, for President, and former Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, a Democrat, for Vice President. The Block statement was issued at Topeka, Kans., where he had stopped for a visit with Gov. Landon.

Landon "Satisfied."

Meanwhile, sixty-three unpledged delegates were added to the roll of the Republican National Convention yesterday after a contest between supporters of an uninstructed delegation and a pro-Landon slate in California and a party convention in Connecticut.

Although a Hearst-Merrian ticket pledged for Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, was defeated on the West Coast, Landon expressed himself as "entirely satisfied" with the results.

The uninstructed delegation, nominally pledged to Earl Warren, California State Republican chairman, a friend of former President Hoover, received 337,945 votes to 250,349 for the Landon delegates in 14,162 of 11,708 precincts. Barring a drastic shift in the final counting, California's 44 delegates will go to Cleveland uninstructed.

Late returns from South Dakota's Republican primary on Tuesday showed a vote of 42,327 for an uninstructed slate of delegates claimed by Landon forces to 41,425 for a delegation pledged to Senator Borah, of Idaho. These totals were for all but 75 of 1,918 precincts. South Dakota sends eight delegates to the convention.

Headed by Roraback.

Connecticut's 19 delegates, chosen yesterday at a convention in Hartford, are to be headed by J. Henry Roraback, veteran State chairman. The convention gave the delegates no instruction.

Democratic forces backing President Roosevelt in California held a 6-to-1 advantage over their opponents—Upton Sinclair of "EPIC" fame and Representative McGroarty of the Townsend plan contingent. The President was unopposed in South Dakota.

In California Roosevelt had 768,617 to 101,403 for the Sinclair group and 58,897 for the McGroarty slate.

Warren, the California Republican leader, promptly "released" the 44 delegates nominally pledged to him, saying:

"We will send to Cleveland outstanding Republicans who will be free to act only in the best interests of our party, State and Nation. It was a great victory."

John Hamilton, Landon's Wash-

Tax Collections On U. S. Bond Sale Disputed

High Court Ruling to Be Sought in Bank Fight Against Levy.

By the Associated Press.

Following a decision yesterday by the United States Court of Claims, the Supreme Court will be asked to rule on the right of the Federal Government to collect income tax on profits from sale of tax-exempt first Liberty Loan gold bonds.

The Court of Claims—in what authorities described as the first decision in a tax refund claim of its kind—held that the Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., of New York (as trustee for Lillia Babbitt Hyde) was not entitled to a refund of $5,529 for income tax paid on profits of $61,275 from the sale of Liberty bonds purchased below par value.

Denying the bank's claim that a tax imposed on the difference between the actual purchase price and par value was an illegal tax on the principal and violated the exemption clause of the revenue act of 1917, Judge Littleton held:

"We are of opinion that a tax exacted on the profit from a sale was not a tax upon the principal of the bonds, and the income tax here involved was, therefore, legally collected.

Decision Deemed Important.

William Cogger, associated with John E. Hughes as attorney for the bank, said yesterday that the case would be carried to the Supreme Court.

Cogger also joined with George H. Foster, of the Attorney General's office, in describing the decision as important because other Government bonds, now being issued, carry the same provision exempting the principal and interest from all taxation, except estate or inheritance taxes, imposed by the United States or other taxing authority.

The court's finding of fact in the case said that the Central Hanover Bank, as trustee, purchased in 1920 in the open market First Liberty Loan bonds of $687,000 par value for $637,515, the then market value.

In 1931 the bonds were sold for $698,791, resulting in a profit of $61,275 and the profit reported in an income tax return for 1931 and computed in accordance with the revenue act then in force.

Exemption Claimed.

A tax of $7,372 was paid and, in 1934, a claim for $5,529 refund was made on grounds that the principal or par value of the bonds, amounting to $687,000, was exempt from tax under the 1917 revenue act.

The court also rejected a second contention by the bank that, if the profit on the sale of the bonds was not exempted from taxation by the statute, the amount claimed should be refunded on grounds that Congress was without power to tax the bonds of the United States.

Previous cases have settled the point that a tax on profits in bond sales is not a tax on the bonds, the court held, "and we fail to see how the income tax involved in the case at bar can be said to be a tax by the United States on its own bonds. It is therefore unnecessary to discuss the second question raised by the plaintiff."

Bank of France Checks Gold Flow

Paris, May 6 (AP).—The Bank of France, seeking to shut off what it considers an alarming flow of gold, stepped up its discount rate today from 5 to 6 per cent.

More than 500,000,000 gold francs were shipped to New York today. There have been rumors that a coming Leftist government might devalue the franc.

The advances on gold bars were raised from 7 per cent to 9 per cent, advances on securities from 6 to 8 per cent, and 30-day advances from 5 to 6 per cent.

The Bourse was active and irregular, with government bonds steady.

'Landon Luck' Becoming Proverbial; California 'Defeat' Turns Out to Be Victory.

By Franklyn Waltman

GOV. ALF M. LANDON of Kansas is, indeed, a fair-haired child of the political gods. This has been suspected by political observers for some time as a result of his phenomenal rise from comparative obscurity as the Governor of an agrarian State to the position of leading contender for the Republican Presidential nomination in less than a year.

WALTMAN

In view of the political developments on Tuesday, it is no longer a suspicion but seems a fact that this Kansan's destiny is guided by Lady Luck. Soon the phrase "Roosevelt Luck" will give way to the more alliterative "Landon Luck." All of which is to say that things politically seem to break just right for Gov. Landon. Even his defeats turn out to be victories.

The result in the California primary illustrates this latter point. There, much against his will, Gov. Landon was made the choice of a slate of delegates to the Cleveland convention. Sponsored by Publisher William Randolph Hearst and Gov. Frank Merriam, against a so-called unInstructed slate, backed by the dominant California Republican leaders and press and containing some ardent friends of the Kansan.

Many months ago Hearst in his anxiety to beat President Roosevelt determined on Gov. Landon as the Republican best able to achieve that end. His publications immediately started boosting Gov. Landon. After a time the San Simeon publisher journeyed to Topeka to look Gov. Landon over personally and pronounced him admirable. And then Hearst—as he usually does—took the bit in his teeth and forced the Landon candidacy into the difficult California situation—difficult because Herbert Hoover, who lives there, still regards himself as the titular leader of the Republican party and is not pleased by the aspirations of others for that honor.

All of this left some of Gov. Landon's intimates uncomfortable and chagrined. For instance, there was the Sage of Emporia, that Liberal Republican, William Allen White, who had spent a lifetime fighting most of the things for which Hearst stands. Yet due to his friendship for Kansas' Governor he faced in the sunset of his life the prospect of being forced to become a political bedmate of Hearst.

Others of the Landon advisers privately have deplored this Hearst support, not only because the latter is distasteful to large groups of voters, but because they realized the Democrats fully intend to make the San Simeon publisher an issue in the approaching campaign, and anyone tagged with a Hearst label would have an extra burden to carry. Even now, Hearst's support is about the only specific unfavorable thing Gov. Landon's foes can think of to say about him.

But as a candidate seeking all the support he can get, Gov. Landon could do nothing about it. He is not the first candidate to pray that all his supporters might be pure of heart—nor will he be the last. But while he did nothing to repudiate Hearst, he did nothing to encourage the man and his satellites. And now, such is his luck, the voters of California repudiated Hearst for him and lifted this burden from his back.

The defeat of the Hearst-Merriam ticket in California, although pledged to Gov. Landon, really turns out to be a Landon victory. His cause in that State is not hopeless. It is estimated that he will have the support of at least one-third of the elected uninstructed delegation. But what is important, he has been spared the necessity of being under any obligations to Hearst.

There is no doubt that, had the Hearst-Merriam ticket been elected the Hearst crowd would have moved in on Cleveland next month and undertaken to run the Republican convention. They would have insisted on being consulted about this or that—and if the Landon forces wavered, they would have been able to sell the Kansan out, just as they sold out John N. Garner in 1932.

Whatever support Gov. Landon gets from California he will get as a result of his own strength and personality. When and if Hearst ever presses him, Gov. Landon can remind the publisher that his support was a liability in California—that even many enthusiastic Landonites would not be parties to it.

But despite this aspect of the California situation, Gov. Landon's foes could have made capital out of what happened there—except for one thing. That was the totally unexpected and surprising result of the Republican primary in South Dakota. The Landon managers had conceded that State's eight delegates to Senator William E. Borah, not believing that the uninstructed ticket which had voluntarily pledged itself to Gov. Landon had a chance. The Landon headquarters made no effort to carry the State except to send in some literature.

Instead of trailing the Borah slate, the Landon candidates jumped into the lead from the start of the vote tabulation and still held a small lead when all but a handful of precincts had reported. Even if the final result gives the victory to Senator Borah, Gov. Landon in that agrarian State, with the party leaders of the State opposing him, demonstrated his popular strength.

The shock proved so great it left the Borah managers muttering about "now you see it—now you don't" shell games.

The South Dakota result is of an importance that far transcends the eight convention votes involved. Senator Borah's chief claim for consideration rests on the contention that he is the choice of the Middle-Western progressives and farmers. Yet, in the first contest in which he comes face to face with the Kansan, with the setup favorable to him, Senator Borah proves a weak candidate in one of the most typical of the Middle-Western agrarian States.

* * * *

The effect of the South Dakota outcome on the Eastern Republican leaders may be profound. They have said they are willing to take as a Presidential candidate the man preferred by the Middle-West. It appears that the crucial test has been held, with Gov. Landon emerging as the victor.

Ellenbogen Bill Gets Favorable Report in House

Early Vote Will Be Sought on 'Little NRA' for Textile Industry.

The Ellenbogen textile bill providing a "little NRA" within the textile industry to regulate working hours, wages and trade practices was reported to the House last night by Chairman William P. Connery, jr., of the House Labor Committee. It was accompanied by two "chaos" in the textile industry, and Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, who urged its adoption to prevent "chaos" in the textile industry; and the other by Representative Fred A. Hartley, jr. (Republican), of New Jersey, who charged the bill is unconstitutional and unfair to the industry.

Chairman Connery announced that he would go before the Rules Committee and ask for an immediate rule to get the bill on the House floor.

Representative Henry Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, author of the bill, professed to see a "fine chance" for its passage at this session.

Prepares for Failure.

However, Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers, seemed less certain of the bill's enactment.

"We are hopeful that the textile control bill will pass and we believe adequate reasons for its passage are contained in the report submitted to the House today by Congressman Keller," he declared, "but we are preparing in the only way we know how to prepare—for its failure.

"There is no reason to beat around the bush. First, we shall do everything in our power to put out of office every man who does not definitely support the bill. This is no joke with the textile workers. We are going into the job of defeating politicians who oppose this progressive measure just as seriously as we went into the textile strike."

Gorman declared emphatically that the Ellenbogen bill is constitutional. He said it is not in the "same class" as the Guffey coal bill. The constitutionality of the latter measure is now being considered by the Supreme Court. "There need be no plea to 'take a chance' on this measure from that standpoint," Gorman said.

Methods Called Obsolete.

Representative Keller, chairman of the Labor sub-committee that considered the bill, took a more moderate view in his report, but he declared adoption of the Ellenbogen measure essential to keep the textile industry from deterioration.

"The merchandising and marketing methods of the industry are obsolete, excessively costly, and have the effect of unduly stimulating consumer prices while at the same time depressing wages and depriving the industry of reasonable profits," he said.

Commenting on the mechanics of the measure, Keller said: "It is but fair to state that the labor representatives made many sacrifices for the sake of securing a bill that has the best chance of being declared constitutional; and, secondly, they made concessions for the benefit of the industry as a whole.

"I wish I might say as much for the representatives of the owners."

Representative Hartley in his minority report on the bill declared it to be both unconstitutional and unnecessary.

"For Congress to take over such regulation of industry is a far-reaching departure from the previous relationship of the American Government to American industry," he said. "The regulation now proposed goes even beyond that attempted for the purpose of meeting the national emergency of the depression under the national industrial recovery act, which has already been declared unconstitutional."

Puerto Rico Bill Offered in House

A bill granting Puerto Rico independence in three months, "and not at the point of a gun," was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Vito Marcantonio (Republican), of New York, who declared that "tories" of the United States have economically ruined the island.

The bill provides for independence of the island 90 days after its enactment, the withdrawal of American military activities, free trade between the two countries so long as the people of Puerto Rico desire it, and unrestricted immigration.

A section of the bill recognizes the responsibility of the United States "for the present disastrous state of Puerto Rican economy, and the poverty of the people, and it is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States that the United States shall be responsible to the Puerto Rican people for any claim of indemnity which the government of Puerto Rico may make."

Marcantonio said:

"Only the gentlemen who stand for reaction in America, the American tories, the banks and sugar corporations who have kept the Puerto Rican people in hunger and misery, are interested in Puerto Rico as a colony."

House Upholds Army Bill Set By Conferees

Record Peace-Time Fund Will Go to White House if Senate Concurs.

By the Associated Press.

The Nation's biggest defense program in peace-time history moved closer to enactment yesterday as Congress whipped 1937 appropriation bills into shape for final disposal.

A record $572,446,844 War Department supply bill, carrying $383,104,859 for purely military purposes, was brought within one step of the White House when the House approved a modified conference report on the measure. The big bill went back to the Senate for concurrence.

At the same time, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved the Naval appropriation bill—also a record peace-time measure. The House bill was amended and trimmed by about $2,000,000 by the Senate Committee, thereby placing before the Senate a $529,125,806 measure.

Battleship Feature Retained.

It retained the House authorization for the construction of two new battleships, provided any other naval treaty power starts similar construction, and would provide also for 333 new airplanes, 18 ships of war in various categories below the class of capital ships, and a boost of naval enlisted strength to 100,000. This would bring it to within 10,000 men of treaty limits.

The Senate committee defeated a move by Chairman Nye (Republican), North Dakota, of the Senate Munitions Committee to take from the naval bill the section dealing with the battleships. Chairman Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Naval Committee said the vote opposing the Nye proposal was "overwhelming."

The Army measure likewise called for more men—the full authorized enlisted strength of 165,000; for 565 more airplanes, and carried approximately $8,500,000 for seacoast defense installations on the West Coast and in Hawaii and the Panama Canal.

Conference Report Approved.

Before acting on the war bill, the House also approved a conference report on the $116,452,125 appropriation bill for the State, Justice, Commerce and Labor departments. That measure also goes back to the Senate for action on one minor amendment.

The only threat to the War Department bill in the Senate existed in the House action in cutting the $58,000,000 the Senate had added for rivers and harbors work to $20,750,000. Republicans led by Representative Taber, of New York, fought having even that much added to the $100,000,000 the House originally approved for such work, and forced a roll call. It developed a 207-to-84 announced vote for the compromise.

were taken on at the last minute, bringing the total persons aboard to more than 100.

Dr. Hugo Eckner, world-famed dirigible expert, and Capt. Ernst Lehman are in joint command of the great air liner. The Hindenburg's destination is Lakehurst, N. J.

It was announced shortly before time to take off that if weather conditions are favorable, the Hindenburg, after reaching its goal, will fly over Washington, Baltimore, Newark and other New Jersey and Delaware cities, as well as New York.

Great precautions were taken to guard against stowaways.

Owing to the size of the hangar at Lakehurst, the Hindenburg's length was reduced nearly 10 feet during the recent overhauling after her first trip to South America. The ship is now about 803 feet long.

Weighs 285 Tons.

Fully loaded, she weighs about 285 tons and is driven by four motors of 1,100 horsepower each. The motors, two of which were damaged on the flight from South America, functioned perfectly tonight. They had been subjected to the most minute examination, including X-ray, at the Zeppelin plant.

To avoid any possibility of accident while landing at Lakehurst, instructions have been given to photographers who will be atop the Lakehurst hangar that they must wear rubber shoes to obviate the chance of sparks from nails in their shoes.

The passenger accommodations aboard the monster dirigible are equal in comfort and space to those in some ocean steamers.

There are 15 Americans aboard, including Commander Scott Ernest Peck, of the United States Navy, and Carl Fickes and Harold Dick, both of the Goodyear Zeppelin Co., of Akron, Ohio.

Capt. Lehmann said the "weather reports are good, but the trip probably will not be made in fast time." The first lap of the trip was over Holland, heading toward the English Channel.

Passengers were allowed 50 pounds of baggage. The passenger fare was $500.

Lakehurst Prepares.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 6 (AP).—The United States Naval Air Station here was the center of renewed activity tonight as it made final preparations for greeting the Hindenburg, new German Zeppelin en route to the United States from Germany. The mammoth craft was due to land Saturday.

As the Hindenburg nosed westward, officers at the station saw in its visits the possibility of renewed official interest in lighter-than-air ships of the rigid type. Residents of Lakehurst borough, whose fortunes have risen and fallen with those of the air station, saw the chance of another boom era.

The Hindenburg will be a paying guest under a contract with the United States Government. Its arrival will be similar to the docking of an ocean liner, with customs, health and immigration inspectors carrying out their regular duties.

Vienna, May 6 (AP).—Dr. Sigmund Freud, distinguished psychoanalyst, appeared ill and enfeebled today as he observed his eightieth birthday.

Numerous telegrams came from writers and scientists the world over. Visits of intimate friends were allowed, but were kept brief.

The only official Austrian message came from Undersecretary of Educatoin Hans Pernter. Authorities banned its publication in the Austrian press, lest such an acknowledgment offend religious groups.

Among visitors was Thornton Wilder, American author, and a message was received from Dr. Albert Einstein.

search for the five snakes, supposedly missing.

"I wouldn't dare go into that room," Miss Zoda told police. "They are just as wild and ferocious as any snakes in the world."

A conference was held and it was decided to try to kill the snakes with poison gas. Men began boring small holes in the hotel room door into which they planned to inject the gas. City chemists were called in to supervise.

Then Miss Zoda volunteered to try again. Once more she pushed open the door. This time she stepped inside and the door closed behind her.

When at last she came out she said she had found all 12 of the snakes. Some of them had been hiding in corners of the room. She took them carefully, one by one, and put them in their cages, not knowing when another deadly reptile would crawl up behind her and strike.

She said she used a forked stick to capture the snakes and tied the neck of each with a leather thong.

He arrived in Montreal several weeks ago and told newspapermen he was going to stage "a battle to the death" between a king cobra and a rattlesnake. When he put the two snakes into the pit, they refused to fight, but went to sleep. Smith cut one of his own arteries with a pair of scissors and fed his blood to each snake in an attempt to infuriate them, but they still wouldn't fight.

Embezzlement Laid to Kurtz, Capital Broker

Grand Jury Also Charges Security Act Violation to Stock Dealer.

The District grand jury yesterday indicted Carl Robertson Kurtz, 44, well known socially and head of a local investment company, on two charges of embezzlement and one of violating the securities act of 1933.

Kurtz, now at liberty on $2,000 bond, was one of more than 60 indicted yesterday. Prominent among the others were Mrs. Alice J. Connelly, who was charged with the second-degree slaying of her husband, Park Policeman John F. Connelly, and William Martin McNarama, who accidentally shot and killed the proprietor of a lunchroom in which his estranged wife, Ruth, worked.

The Kurtz indictment charges a shortage of some $20,000 in three cases. In all three instances Kurtz is charged with having taken either cash or securities from clients. In each case the complainants said they never received the securities. Named as complainants were Arthur Stedman Hills, of the Munsey Building; Dr. Howard E. Smith, of the Department of Agriculture, and Commander Claude S. Gillette, who appeared as a representative of the American Society of Naval Engineers.

Chef's Death Involved.

McNamara, 20, who came here from Virginia to attempt a reconcillation with his wife, is charged with having shot and killed John Mikedis, chef at the Liberty Cafe, 804 K street northwest, when the latter attempted to dissuade him from shooting his wife.

In another indictment, Mrs. Connelly, 37, wife of Policeman John E. Connelly, is alleged to have shot him fatally when she feared he was about to attack her after a St. Patrick's Day party.

Fred B. Smithwick, 23, whose automobile is alleged to have caused the death of Miss Edith Scott, 47, 1348 Kenyon street northwest, last March, was charged with manslaughter after the grand jury returned a presentment against him. Smithwick, police said, was fleeing a police car when his own machine crashed into the automobile in which Miss Scott was riding.

Other indictments yesterday charged two women, Mrs. Margaret L. Gardner, wife of a Nashville, N. C., physiican, and Daisy Duffell with violating the narcotic laws.

Others Indicted.

Others indicted were: John Poser, George Harris, Timothy Floyd, Elwood Obery, housebreaking and larceny; John T. Saunders, John N. Parker, Berkeley Cleveland Smith, Raymond Sutton, Herbert W. Johnson and Clarence Precis, joyriding; William H. Carey and Raymond Vidi, robbery; Roderick H. Purks, Sam J. Henry and Owina Dyer, forgery and uttering; Mary E. Weber, false pretenses; Meyer Ehrlich, Jacob Ehrlich, Michael Kaplan, Joseph Lowe, Vincent Nocera, Otto Weiserber, Clinton Chambers, Bert Pierce, gaming charges; William P. Majors, violation of the liquor taxing act of 1934; Margaret L. Gardner and Daisy Duffel, narcotic charges; Carl Mitchell, Arnold Doe and Robert M. Picquette, carnal knowledge; Harris L. Jones, incest; Wesley Shaw, first degree murder.

Those against whom the grand jury ignored charges were: Joseph Pollard and Russell Fisher, joy ridings; Elmo Fraison, grand larceny, and Leslie L. Daniels, assault with a dangerous weapon.

Geoghan Calls Ellis Parker, Sr. Kidnaping Aid

Says New Jersey Detective Was One of Wendel Abductors.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 6.—District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan tonight declared Ellis H. Parker, sr., rural New Jersey detective chief, was "certainly one of the kidnapers" of Paul H. Wendel, former Trenton attorney, who asserts he was tortured into signing spurious statements implicating himself in the Lindbergh case.

Geoghan, directing a Brooklyn grand jury investigation into the Wendel affair, said he made this statement on the basis of the story told police by Murray Bleefeld, former taxicab driver, who surrendered to Brooklyn authorities in Cincinnati last week.

Bleefeld, in whose home Wendel says he was held until he signed a "confession" to the Lindbergh kidnaping, appeared before the grand jury again today, but the nature of his testimony was not divulged.

Discussing statements made by Bleefeld to the police, Geoghan said: "If this fellow's story is true, Gov. Hoffman (of New Jersey) knew that efforts were being made to get a confession out of somebody."

He added, however, that "There has been nothing that involves the Governor either in the kidnaping or in the assault."

No charge has been made against Chief Parker, who figured prominently in the Hall-Mills case and whose private investigation of the Lindbergh kidnaping led him to the expressed belief that Bruno Richard Hauptmann was not alone guilty.

His son, Ellis H. Parker, jr., has been indicted with Bleefeld and three others on a charge of kidnaping and assaulting Wendel.

"Parker, sr., was certainly one of the kidnapers," Geoghan said, "because he visited the house several times while Wendel was being held, and the others were taking their orders from him."

Son of Phipps to Wed.

Denver, May 6 (AP).—Former Senator and Mrs. Lawrence C. Phipps, sr., announced today their son, Allan Rogers Phipps, and Miss Doreen Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Graham Evans, of London, England, will be married in London in August.

Italians Repel Bandit Attack On 2 Legations

Protect Ministry of U. S., France; Graziani's Army Advances.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, May 6.—Italian forces of occupation swung into action today, repulsing bandit attacks on the American and French legations and driving marauding bands to mountain hideouts.

On the southern front Gen. Rodolpho Graziani's "hell on wheels" columns occupied Euthiopian fortifications at Jijiga, which had been abandoned by their commanders, Dedjazmatch Nasibu I and Wahib Pasha, Turkish general. They drove a wedge between Jijiga and Harar, which is expected to fall momentarily.

Bands of shiftas (Ethiopian bandits) suffered heavy losses when they attacked the reoccupied American Legation. Sixty infantrymen assigned to protect the legation by Marshal Pietro Radoglio drove off the attackers in a night skirmish, killing many.

Other scattered fighting was witnessed from the French Legation. Italian detachments fought bands of Ethiopians in the Place l'Etoil. Subsequently a company of Askaris was ordered to protect the French Legation from bandits.

Except for scattered skirmishing, the first 24 hours of Italian occupation has been quiet. Heavily armed troops are patrolling the streets in lorries. Throughout last night searchlights played on buildings from which Ethiopians might cause trouble.

Badoglio, at his general headquarters in the Italian Legation, devoted himself to administrative matters. He appointed Giuseppe Bottai, former governor of Rome, governor of Addis Ababa. Bottai entered the capital at Badoglio's side yesterday. Bottai relinquished his post as governor of Rome to volunteer for service with Black Shirt legions in East Africa several months ago.

Graziani, reporting Jijiga's occupation to Badoglio, indicated he expected to enter Harar late today. After taking Jijiga his forces proceeded along a caravan trail to Harar.

lutely indispensable for the organization of international affairs.

"There must also be a taking of stock, and that stock taking should, in the view of the government, be undertaken by the League—although not hurriedly.

"No doubt a blow has been struck at the structure of the League and the conception of collective security. We must face these facts frankly."

Sanctions End Urged.

Berlin, May 6 (AP).—The foreign office, through its mouthpiece, the newspaper Deutsche Diplomatische Korrespondenz, said tonight Germany favored the ending of sanctions against Italy and wanted to see a general European accord signed.

Disregarding talk abroad that Premier Mussolini's "return to Europe" after the Ethiopian victory would be against Germany's interests, the foreign office said it welcomed the fact Il Duce could now give attention to Europe as a factor likely to contribute to peace.

The article said it took it for granted that countries formerly opposed to revision of the League of Nations now are favorable toward it.

tors calling for help, all the occupants might have been killed.

"The American Legation was the only one situated in the danger zone."

According to informed sources, the American Legation is on the northern side of Addis Ababa, and but 1 mile away from the Italian Legation, and but 3 miles from the British Legation in the sprawling city.

In general the situation was quiet, according to Minister Engert's last message to the State Department here.

Secretary Hull, at a press conference here yesterday, refused to comment upon the probable attitude of the United States toward the provisional Ethiopian government to be set up by the Italian conquerors.

He also declined to comment on Rome dispatches that a civil governor had already been appointed by the Italian military for Adis Ababa. It was held in some quarters that the present American foreign policy would be maintained, which is not to recognize sovereignty acquired by force of arms.

Rome Warns

dor to Rome visited the Italian foreign office with a demand that Italy respect French rights in Ethiopia.

Mussolini has been warned that France, Great Britain, Russia, the Little Entente and the Balkan Entente will refuse to recognize Ethiopia as an Italian colony because recognition of a policy of conquest by force would establish a dangerous precedent.

The French believe, also, that the United States will refuse to recognize Italy's claim that Ethiopia now is an Italian colony.

Italy Plans Rigid Program.

By the Associated Press.

Italy will present a rigid program of "Ethiopia for Italy," and as for Geneva, "hands off," at a meeting of the League of Nations Council Monday, well-informed sources said tonight.

This position was adopted after Premier Mussolini's declaration yesterday that "Ethiopia is Italian" and the appointment today of Giuseppe Bottai, former governor of Rome, as civil governor of Addis Ababa.

Fascist sources said Italy would refuse to accept ideas expressed in leading French newspapers that Ethiopia is still a member of the League, that France's special claims must be respected in Ethiopia and that a "moderate solution" would be best internationally.

Moreover, it was hinted strongly that Great Britain and France, who previously had zones of Ethiopian influence guaranteed them, had lost their guarantees by virtue of their opposition to Italy.

The keynote of editorials here was that Italy in the moment of her victory would not forget the antagonism she faced from European nations while achieving it.

Bills 'Growing' on Trees May Be Mail Theft Loot

Dandridge, Tenn., May 6 (AP).—They were picking $5 bills off of willow trees and cornstalks along the French Broad River near here today. The money apparently was deposited by recent high water.

More than $100 of the recovered bills had been brought to the bank here and about $20 to the postoffice. The bills are new, but torn and mutilated. All of the money is of the 1928 series. Business was nearly at a standstill as folks went out to hunt money.

One theory was that the money might be part of $80,000 missing from a Charlotte, N. C., mail robbery, believed to have been hidden in Cocke County.

Worker Badly Hurt In Sand Pit Cave-In

Harry Matthews, 43, was injured seriously late yesterday afternoon when he was pinned beneath the falling wall of a 30-foot-deep sand pit at Third street and Riggs road northeast.

Falling sand caught Matthews as he was attempting to run from the pit. He was thrown to the ground and a pile of sand and dirt crumbled over his body.

Another workman, Lewis Grow, was working in the pit with Matthews when the walls began to crumble. The fall caught his foot as he was fleeing, but he escaped without injury.

Matthews was rescued by Grow, J. W. Campbell, a Washington contractor, for whom the men were working, and another workman. He suffered body bruises and lacerations of the head.

Matthews lives at 417 Riggs road northeast.

Jamaica Race Bets Unaffected By N. Y. Ruling

Threat to 'Enforce Law' Seen Only as Move to Obtain Pari-Mutuels.

New York, May 6 (AP).—Despite a ruling by Attorney General Bennett that wagering is illegal and a threat by Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine to "enforce the law," betting on the horses went on as usual at Jamaica today.

There was little indication that there would be any change. Turfmen interpreted the ruling made by the Attorney General at the suggestion of John J. Dunnigan, Democratic leader in the State Senate, as merely another move in Dunnigan's efforts to install pari-mutuel machines in the State.

Although the interpretation of the betting law was considered merely a technicality, Commissioner Valentine declared his department would "enforce the law" as soon as he receives a copy of the attorney general's opinion.

The commissioner pointed out, however, that the New York police department was concerned only with Jamaica and Aqueduct, the two tracks within the city limits. Jamaica closes Saturday, and Belmont Park, situated in Nassau County, opens Monday. Empire City, the fourth metropolitan track, is in Westchester County.

Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman of the State racing commission, declared he was more than satisfied with Bennett's opinion.

Swope said he considered the ruling "in support of racing as now conducted."

"This means," he continued, "that betting is permissible. It certainly no longer is a crime, although technically it is still illegal. But so is taking an extra fish in the open season. Such an act also is subject to civil action, the same as horse-race betting."

Church Group to Meet.

The All Souls' Church Alliance, Sixteenth and Harvard streets northwest, is holding a members' birthday party tomorrow at 11. Mrs. Paul Heyl will give an illustrated talk on Egypt and Mrs. James M. Doran will describe her recent trip to Europe.

Security Act Aims Told to Conference

The Social Security Act is "merely a system by which labor and capital combine" for the benefit of the aged, the ailing and the unemployed, Frank Bane, executive secretary of the Social Security Board, explained to State directors of women's and professional projects of the Works Progress Administration here yesterday.

Bane spoke at the final luncheon session of the conference's three-day meeting here, which was attended by more than 100 directors from all sections of the United States. Yesterday's sessions were held at the Carlton Hotel.

Following Bane's speech, the convention closed its sessions with a talk by Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, and with routine reports of State directors.

Methodist Plan Held First Step For Unification

United Protestantism Forecast by Speaker at Church Conference.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, May 6.—An opinion that unification of the three branches of Methodism would be an initial step toward eventual union of all Protestant churches was expressed today by the Rev. Ivan Lee Holt, of St. Louis, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Holt told delegates to the Methodist Episcopal Conference who approved Methodist unification Monday that "it is only the beginning of a process."

"Some of the leaders see in the distance one great Protestant Church, such as was formed in Canada," he said. "Even beyond the united Protestantism may come a united Christianity, a union of all Protestant faiths with the great Catholic churches."

Holt said that with unification of the Methodist churches approved the "dream we have all had of one great Protestant Church comes closer to realization."

"I am hoping that when that uniting conference comes together (to form the United Methodist Church) one of the things done will be the creation of a commission to work on plans for a still larger Protestant union."

The federation president said "we have come to a time when the evils in this world are too great for any sort of a divided church."

Holt told the conference five international groups were already at work with final union of all Christian groups as their goal. They are the World Conference On Faith and Order, the World Conference On Life and Work, the World Alliance for International Friendship, The International Missionary Council and the International Student Federation.

Jury Indicts Two In 'Snake' Murder

Los Angeles, May 6 (AP).—The "rattlesnake death plot," which ended in the drowning of Robert S. James' fifth wife, caused the county grand jury to return first-degree murder indictments today against James, a barber, and Charles H. (Chuck) Hope, former sailor.

A sordid insurance plot, consummated in bizarre fashion—that was the story Hope repeated before the grand jory. He testified Mary Emma Bush James was killed so he and her husband might collect $2,400 insurance.

Hope's story was that he purchased rattlesnakes, at the instance of James, as instruments of death. He told the jurors he assisted James in putting Mrs. James' body in a fish pond after James had drowned her in a bathtub. Before this, the former sailor said, the victim was drugged and trussed to a table and her leg thrust into a box of hissing snakes.

U. S. Prepared For European Money Tangle

2 Billion Stabilization Fund Held Available in Crisis of Franc.

By the Associated Press.

Treasury officials said last night they were prepared to defend the dollar against virtually any turn the perplexing European monetary situation might take.

The Department's experts, they added, have plotted carefully their moves in advance, figuring on all foreseeable developments in the crisis of the franc, and the ramifications that might arise from ensuing action by the British.

In addition, they said, they were equipped with all necessary authority for action and that the entire stabilization fund of $2,000,000,000 or nearly that amount was available for instant use if needed.

Dispatches from world financial centers reported a belief in informed quarters that the fund already was at work supporting the franc, but officials here declined to comment, following a long-standing policy of never so much as hinting at what the fund may be doing.

Response Jocular.

These developments followed a press conference assertion by President Roosevelt that the Treasury was on guard 24 hours a day against foreign exchange trends which might threaten the external value of the dollar. In that sense, he said in a semi-jocular response to a question, the Treasury re-arms itself every day.

The first object of present care and watchfulness at the moment, is, of course, the franc, weakened in recent days by political uncertainties, leading to a renewed flight of gold from France which was partly stemmed yesterday by an increase from 5 to 6 per cent in the rediscount rate of the Bank of France.

Once before when the franc was endangered, the stabilization fund went to its rescue, supplying dollar exchange to absorb a frenzied flight of capital from the franc.

Available Now.

Originally established as a $2,000,000,000 fund by Congress, in approving the devaluation of the dollar, its activities for two years have been carried out with but $200,000,000 of that amount. The remaining $1,800,000,000 has stood to the fund's credit on the Treasury books, meanwhile, with officials emphasizing yesterday that it was available for instant use.

The principal result to date of the franc's weakness has been the heavy flow of European gold to America, amounting to more than $1,800,000,000 since January, 1935. Officials have made it clear they entertain no enthusiasm for a continuance of this flood.

One of its chief effects has been to build up enormous excess bank reserves, which, in turn, are capable of conversion into a runaway credit boom, unless checked by the Federal Reserve authorities, who have been given powers in that direction which they consider ample.

Carnival Planned At Western High

A May carnival in which turtle races, vaudeville acts and light opera will be program features, will be staged tomorrow night at Western High School. Students and faculty members will join in the entertainment bill which will be launched at 8 p. m.

Among the stage presentations will be the Hop-Along-Revue given by the Dramatic Association, a marionette show directed by Frances Shinn, a comic opera by the Glee Club, a May festival by the Girls' gymnasium classes, a series of living pictures by the art classes, a science show by the Biology Club and a puppet exhibition by Roy Gerlach.

There will be fortune telling, a kangaroo court, an amateur program, a sideshow and games of skill.

Turtle races, for which prizes will be awarded, will furnish one of the evening high lights. There will be a series of free-for-all events, in which all comers may enter, providing their turtles are "2 inches in diameter, or under." For those who haven't turtles of their own, racers can be rented at the carnival, an announcement yesterday said.

Jews to Observe 80th Anniversary

The Washington Hebrew Congregation will celebrate its eightieth anniversary tomorrow night.

The exercises will be held at the Eighth Street Temple. The Rev. Dr. Leo M. Franklin, of Temple Beth El, Detroit, Mich., will preach the anniversary sermon.

Intimately connected with the history of Jewry in the National Capital, the Eighth Street Temple is the oldest Hebrew synagogue in Washington.

Rabbi of the Eighth Street Temple is Dr. Abram Simon, who recently celebrated his thirty-second anniversary in the post and who has attained national recognition as a Jewish leader. For many years he has been prominently identified with civic affairs.

T. W. McGregor, Philanthropist, Is Dead at 67

Heart Attack Is Fatal to Benefactor; Services in Detroit.

Tracy W. McGregor, 67, philanthropist and book collector, died of a heart attack yesterday in Garfield Hospital.

Born in Berlin Heights, Ohio, April 14, 1869, McGregor was the son of Elizabeth and Thomas McGregor, who founded a chain of homes for the destitute.

For 2½ years he studied at Oberlin College, but on the death of his father he left college to take up the work of directing the missions which his father had founded in Detroit.

He was among the founders of the group known as the Thursday Organization, which did much social work, including the construction of the Wadgmega Home for Epileptics, and the advancing of funds for the construction of the Belle Isle Bridge, when the city of Detroit lacked the money.

He also was president of the Whitney Realty Co., the LaSalle Land Co., the Provident Loan & Savings Society, the Merrill-Palmer School, and the McGregor Fund, and trustee of the Good Will Farm School, and the American Historical Association.

He was interested in probation work and was a director of the National Probation Association. He was a former president of the Detroit Community Fund and the Wayne County Training School for the Feeble Minded.

His hobby was the collection of source books on American history, and at the time of his death he was preparing to aid a number of University libraries in obtaining copies of such volumes.

He was a member of the National Committee on the Care of Transients and Homeless, and a member of a committee to advise the Washington Board of Public Welfare on transient problems.

McGregor also was a member of many clubs, including the Chevy Chase Club, the Cosmos Club, the Detroit Club, the University Club of Detroit, the Detroit Athletic Club and the Grolier Club.

He was a member of the English Bibliographical Society, and also the Bibliographical Society of America. He was a member of the First Congregational Church.

McGregor made his home in the Shoreham Hotel in Washington, but had an office at 1901 Wyoming avenue. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Katherine Whitney McGregor.

Funeral services will be held in Detroit.

$50,000 Gem Loot Uncovered in Vault

Chicago, May 6 (AP).—Police drilled open an uptown safe deposit vault today and uncovered a cache of stolen jewels estimated by Detective Sal Corsi to be worth $50,000.

Most of the rings and stones were identified by number and otherwise as the loot taken recently in robberies of jewelry stores at Lima and Dayton, Ohio, Corsi announced.

The robberies were committed, Corsi said, by a gang headed by Alfred Brady, alias Barton, who was arrested here last week and returned to Indianapolis to face prosecution for the death of Police Sergt. Richard Rivers, slain in the escape after the Lima robbery.

"Isaac Beckman" was the name under which the vault had been rented. Corsi said "Beckman" was Robert Becker, sought in connection with disposal of the loot here. His brother, Jack Becker, 26, is in custody.

Fat Girls Get The Go-By—Slim Girls Win Men

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

Here's a way to get rid of ugly fat that works hand in hand with Nature. Millions of people are losing millions of pounds of flabby flesh and getting back slender figures, without the need of starvation diets or back-breaking exercises.

Medical science has discovered that one of the causes of too much fat lies in a little gland. It is the duty of this tiny gland to make about one drop and a half every day of a vital fluid. This helps the body "burn" up food and excess fatty tissues just as a good draft of air helps the furnace to burn up coal without forming "clinkers". If this little gland doesn't make this drop and a half of fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat.

Doctors correct this condition by feeding this little gland the substance it lacks—and Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a world-famous medical laboratory. Their formula is published in every package so you know what you are taking.

So don't waste time and money with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Go to your druggist today and get a box of Marmola. Try this simple, easy way to get rid of excess fat.

Frank W. Mahin Dies; Rites Set For Tomororw

Consul for U.S. During War at Amsterdam Was Ill for 2 Weeks.

Frank Webster Mahin, 84, American consul at Amsterdam during the World War and one-time newspaper publisher, died yesterday at his home, 1851 Columbia road northwest. He had been ill for about two weeks with a heart ailment. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 in Gawler's funeral home. Burial will be private.

Mr. Mahin had been typesetter, lawyer, editor, publisher, foreign service officer and free-lance writer.

He was born in Muscatine, Iowa, and at an early age became an apprentice typesetter on the Muscatine Journal, owned by his brother. Working there at the same time was Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain), then a journeyman printer, with whom Mr. Mahin began a friendship that continued until the author's death.

Mr. Mahin attended Iowa Wesleyan University, Harvard Law School and Columbia Law School. After receiving his degree from Columbia he returned to Iowa where he practiced law for two years.

In 1881 he purchased the Clinton (Iowa) Daily Herald and served as editor of that paper until 1897. An ardent prohibitionist, he started a campaign, in co-operation with his brother's paper, that was said to be largely responsible for the introduction of local option in Iowa.

School Trustee.

He was trustee of the Iowa State Normal School from 1888 to 1890 and a regent of Iowa State University from 1894 to 1897. From 1891 to 1987 he served as colonel of the First Regiment, Iowa National Guard.

In 1897 Mr. Mahin left the newspaper business to enter the Consular Service. He was stationed first at Reichenberg, Bohemia (now Czechoslovakia), and then at Nottingham, England.

In 1910 he was transferred to Amsterdam and remained there until 1913, when he resigned to engage in magazine writing in Washington. He contributed articles on international affairs to the North American Review, the Atlantic Monthly and other periodicals.

He re-entered the foreign service in 1915 and was again appointed consul at Amsterdam, where he continued until his retirement in 1924. The Queen of the Netherlands made him an officer of the Royal Order of Orange Nassau following his retirement.

On Torpedoed Boat.

Mr. Mahin and his wife were among the passengers on the Dutch ship, Queen Wilhelmina, which was torpedoed by the Germans in the North Sea in the summer of 1916. They escaped in lifeboats and were picked up by a British destroyer.

Mr. Mahin had lived in Washington since 1925. He was a member of the Cosmos Club, the National Press Club, the Art and Archeological Society and a director of the English-Speaking Union.

He leaves his wife, the former Abbie A. Cadle, of Muscatine; a daughter, Mrs. A. R. Tweedie, of Nottingham, England; a son, Lieut. Col. Frank C. Mahin, stationed at the headquarters of the First Corps Area, Boston, Mass., and five grandchildren.

East Assisted By Farm Relief, Farley Asserts

Tells Connecticut Session Shipments to West Increased.

By the Associated Press.

Hartford, Conn., May 6.—Postmaster General James A. Farley told Connecticut Democrats tonight that the East had benefitted from farm relief through "enormously increased" shipments of manufactured goods to the West.

At a meeting sponsored by the Democratic State Committee, the chairman of the party's National Committee described attacks on the Administration as "fly specks on the fair canvas on which a statesman has inscribed a wonderful recovery for a shaken people."

"It may seem scandalous to those who have not analyzed the situation that a farmer in Nebraska should have been paid something for abstaining from planting his whole acreage in wheat or corn," Farley said, "but when you figure that what he got came to you for the things your factories supply, it may not seem so monstrous after all."

Discussing criticisms of relief administration as "absurd generalities," Farley said:

"Undoubtedly, it is very probable that in the distribution of emergency relief to the extent of billions of dollars some small soul got $4 worth of groceries for nothing when he could have paid for them. Undoubtedly an occasional idler has not performed a full day's work for his relief pay. What of it?

"Work had to be provided for men and women incapable of digging ditches or driving trucks, but just as subject to hunger and other suffering as the sturdiest among us."

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office

By Morgan Baker.

The Federal Government can function best as a fact-finding agency in the promotion of thrift through credit unions as it has done in the fields of labor, commerce and agriculture, Herbert Emmerich, executive officer of the Farm Credit Administration, told a rally of Federal Credit Union members in the Agriculture auditorium.

BAKER.

"Credit unions in the District doubled in membership in the last half of 1935," Emmerich said. "There are now 50 credit unions in the District chartered by the Federal Government and 25 chartered by the District government. Membership in these organizations includes both Government employes and workers in private business. It is one of the valuable functions of the District Credit Union League that it helps to bridge the gap that too often exists between Government workers and business employes."

In America, he points out, 1,318 Federal credit unions had taken out charters by the end of April. Their total membership is conservatively estimated at 150,000 and their assets at $3,000,000, while their total loans since organization were placed at $4,500,000.

"This growth could not have been achieved without the aid of field agents in bringing credit-union principles in person to groups throughout the country," Emmerich said.

Thomas W. Doig, assistant managing director of the Credit Union National Association, spoke on the wide prevalence of usury in America and the value of State and national organizations of credit unions in combating it and in protecting individual credit unions.

They are custodial employes of Cleveland, No. 560, and War engineers, No. 561, of Mobile. Membership in the N. F. F. E. is limited to Federal employes. Miss McNally points out, as she reports the organization "continues to moveforward steadily toward its goal of 1,000 local unions and 100,000 members."

Episcopalians Hear Diocesan Reports

Delegates to the forty-first convention of the local Episcopal diocese listened to reports of the treasurer and committee appointed at the last convention, at the opening session in St. Stephen's Church yesterday.

A resolution thanking Dr. Stephen Kramer, associate superintendent of District schools, for his 25 years' service as treasurer of the department of missions, was adopted by the convention.

Last night Bishop James E. Freeman, presiding officer at the convention, was host to delegates at a fellowship dinner in the parish hall of Stephen's Church.

The Bishop gave a short welcoming address, which was followed by recitations, songs and motion pictures provided by E. B. Thompson.

The meetings will continue this morning with election of officers, and appointment of committees and trustees by the president.

Navy Details Officers To Train at Lakehurst

The Navy Department yesterday announced selection of two young lieutenants for training in lighter-than-air craft at the Lakehurst Naval Air Station.

They are Richard N. Antrim, Peru, Ind., and Richard S. Andrews, Sante Fe, N. Mex. Their course, to last one year, will include training in nonrigid airships at Lakehurst and in the Los Angeles in a non-flying capacity.

Security Laws Non-Partisan Perkins Says

Wagner Credits New Deal, However, in Speech to Trade Union Rally.

The needs of our people can not be made the subject of partisan politics, Frances Perkins last night told a mass meeting of the National Women's Trade Union League of America.

"And I say this," she added, "knowing that my party would be glad to take credit for its social legislation."

Preceding the Secretary of Labor on the platform of the Labor Building auditorium, Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, called the NIRA an "unequalled charter of the common people's rights." Permanent evasion of the Federal Government's duty to bring it back in some form, he said, would be a "clear abandonment of human rights."

Taking the opposite tack from Miss Perkins' non-partisan approach, Wagner concluded:

"Four years from now, when the second period of the Roosevelt leadership will have accomplished as much as the first, we shall be much nearer to affording labor the security and opportunities which all free men deserve."

Secretary Perkins, speaking of the social security program, said that she was happy to announce, for the first time, that every State in the Union and every territory was now co-operating with it in some way, having submitted one or more plans or laws for approval of the Federal Government.

"This means," she said, "that in more than three-fourths of the States well over a half-million needy aged persons will be assisted this spring jointly by the Federal and State governments. They will receive—not grocery orders, or rent and clothing tickets—but cash allowances in accordance with their needs. Does this spell defeat for the principle of State and Federal co-operation?"

Rose Schneiderman, president of the league, also spoke.

2 Boy Fliers Set Non-Stop Record

Columbus, Ohio, May 6 (U.P.).—A nonstop distance record for light planes was believed to have been set today by two youths who landed their monoplane here at 2:25 p. m., after a flight from Los Angeles.

Bob Buck, of Westfield, N. J., and his cousin, Lee Bellingrath, said their unofficial mark was 2,016 miles—about 200 miles better than the record held by a French plane.

They carried a sealed barograph which will be sent to Washington for calibration.

Buck and Bellingrath landed on a specially built skid, having dropped their landing gear when they left Los Angeles at 7:34 p. m. yesterday.

The plane had a 90-horse power engine.

Self-Inflicted Shot Kills Fairfax Man

Ralph Lewis, 42, of Lincolnia, Fairfax County, Va., shot and killed himself yesterday morning at his home. Ill health was given as the reason.

His body was discovered by his wife, Nita. She had prepared his breakfast and was taking it to him when she found him dying from effects of a rifle bullet in his head, Dr. C. A. Ransom, county coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Lewis was a native of Fairfax county, living near Lincolnia all his life. For many years he had been employed as a dispatcher by the Southern Railway at Alexandria.

Besides his wife, he is survived by five children, Denny Lewis, Orange, Va.; Jean Lewis, Washington; James, Annie and Allen Mead Lewis, of Lincolnia. Funeral arrangements had not been completed late last night.

House Authorizes $15,000 for G. A. R.

The House late yesterday passed by unanimous consent a joint resolution authorizing expenditure of $15,000 for the Seventieth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held in Washington next September.

Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, called up the resolution and asked for its immediate passage so that it might not be lost in the legislative rush before adjournment.

The amendment resolution permits the District Commissioners to expend a $15,000 authorization "for such expenses incident to the encampment as the said Commissioners in their discretion and judgment, may deem advisable."

The committee report explained that while it is not customary to provide funds for such conventions except for the protection of life and public property, the G. A. A. encampment is considered an exceptional occasion.

Montana Freeze, Snow Menace Crops, Autoists

Helena, Mont., May 6 (AP).—Snow, hail, rain and freezing temperatures threatened heavy crop damage, grounded airplanes and blocked highways in scattered Montana areas today.

Melting snow and softened earth sent an avalanche onto the Yellowstone-Glacier highway near Nelhart. It was estimated it would take a week to clear the road.

Landon In California.

Widely divergent interpretations are being placed upon the results of the Republican primary in California because the issues at stake have not been clearly understood. Some casual observers, noting the substantial majority of votes for the uninstructed delegates to the Republican National Convention, jump to the conclusion that Gov. Landon "took a beating" in California. In the light of the campaigns conducted by both factions that view is difficult to maintain.

In the first place, there was no fight between aspirants for the nomination. The uninstructed ticket is exactly what it purports to be. That was conclusively proved when Earl Warren, Republican State chairman, to whom the delegates were pledged, released them to vote as they desire at the national convention. On the other hand, Gov. Landon neither affirmed nor repudiated the slate of delegates pledged to him through the activities of Gov. Merriam and William Randolph Hearst.

Supporters of the Kansas Governor were lined up on both sides of a local fight. The Landon-for-President Club in Los Angeles repudiated the leadership of Merriam and Hearst and appealed to friends of the Governor to vote for the uninstructed delegates. A similar position was taken by some of California's leading newspapers. The uninstructed delegation was sponsored by the Los Angeles Times, the San Francisco Chronicle and the Oakland Tribune. But the Times, for example, appealed to "those who have the Kansan's best interests genuinely at heart" to "support the free ticket of California delegates and clear Gov. Landon of the imputation that has been thrust upon him."

It is evident, therefore, that the fight turned upon local issues. Republicans of California rejected the leadership of the Merriam-Hearst faction, without expressing any clear-cut choice for the Presidential nomination. Some of the winning delegates are known to be favorable to Landon. Some will doubtless support other candidates. However, with the growing indications that former President Hoover will make no attempt to secure the nomination, it is reasonable to believe that a considerable share of California's 44 delegates will be found in the Landon column when the voting begins at Cleveland.

Incidentally, the choice of a Republican candidate will be made easier by Senator Borah's statement that "if Mr. Landon or Mr. Knox comes up to the Cleveland convention with a fair expression of the people that he is their choice, I'm not going to stand in the way."

The Three Plagues.

The General Education Board, founded by John D. Rockefeller, sr., recently announced a $3,000,000 gift to provide a new building for Memorial Hospital which specializes in the study and treatment of cancer. The malignancy of the disease and the mystery of its cause and cure will stir a romantic-minded public to keen appreciation of this gift. The reputation of Memorial Hospital, long affiliated with the Cornell Medical College, in the field of cancer makes the news doubly pleasing. The fight against cancer is notably strengthened when medicine is backed up by such reinforcements.

Cancer is the second great plague of modern times. The first, not only because of its prevalence, but also because it has been longest recognized, is tuberculosis. In this case, the techniques of prevention and cure are well enough known, yet tuberculosis has not been wiped out at a single stroke. Complete eradication of the disease awaits improvement of living conditions and cooperation of the general public. Science has donated its best energy and ability to devise successful treatment for both these maladies, but the actual fighting must be carried on by the average men and women of the world.

With this realization, it is bitterly ironic that, though the doctors have completed the most perfect strategy to whip the third plague, there is no concerted movement for its eradication. The third great plague today is syphilis. Together with gonorrhea, it attacks more than 1,000,000 new victims yearly in the United States. In Washington, these two diseases represent an unbelievable menace to public health. In 1919, 116 cases were reported to the local Health Department; in 1933, the total had mounted to 5,120. More thorough physical examinations may well account for much of the increase. But it is certain that the venereal diseases are not under control here or elsewhere.

Since both may be cured as well as prevented, it is a tragedy that no better progress has been made against them. A smoke screen of mistaken prudery protects them well. So effective is this barrier to effective attack upon the problem that in the 1937 Treasury appropriation bill, only $80,000 is being discussed for the venereal disease division of the U. S. Public Health Service as against $2,000,000 to combat chinch bugs and $4,000,000 to control the Mediterranean fruit fly.

Labor And Politics.

In an address to the National Women's Trade Union League, Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers, forecasts a new political alignment in the United States. Since he advocates creation of a genuine Labor Party, he apparently has in mind the concentration of all employers in one camp and all employed persons in another. That development is an old story in Europe, but its applicability to the conditions of American democracy is open to serious question.

The current trend is undeniably in the direction of partisanship within the American Federation of Labor. Some time ago the United Mine Workers enthusiastically indorsed the candidacy of President Roosevelt. Now President Green of the A. F. of L. has taken a similar course, although he apparently did not speak officially for the federation. If the executive council, meeting in Washington this week, should follow his lead the tradition of non-partisanship in the parent labor organization would be pretty well shattered.

Before that step is taken leaders of the A. F. of L. should seriously contemplate its implications. Is organized labor ready to identify its cause with that of a political party? If so, is the action merely opportunist, or is it a step toward the distinctive Labor Party which Mr. Gorman foresees? And, since it takes two to make a bargain, is the Democratic party willing to be defined not as an instrument of democracy but as the organ of one well-organized group therein?

Samuel Gompers, father of the modern labor movement in the United States, made a practice of turning political situations to the advantage of the working man. But, in his own language, he "refused to let the labor movement be annexed by a political party and . . . refused to lead them into a policy from which it would take decades to recover." It does not appear that changing conditions of themselves warrant departure from his effective methods of promoting the cause of Labor through both major political parties.

One motive behind Mr. Green's break with the philosophy of his predecessor is apparent.

His momentous struggle with John L. Lewis, president of the U. M. W., over industrial unionism keeps the A. F. of L. chief constantly on the firing line. He is well aware of President Roosevelt's popularity among the rank and file of working men. By publicly advocating the President's re-election, in spite of previous appeals to affiliated unions to remain aloof from political organizations, he takes some wind from the sails of Mr. Lewis. Even if that could be written down as an achievement for Labor, however, it would still offer no justification whatever for the undermining of the A. F. of L.'s nonpartisan tradition.

While this movement goes forward within the ranks of labor, some industrial and business organizations are inclined to line up against the present Administration. In both cases the result is unfortunate. Group organizations which are essentially self-asserting in character may properly concern themselves with principles and national policies. But when they set out to oppose or indorse any party or candidate as a body, they weaken their own independent position and foster unnecessary friction in essential economic relationships.

Dresses With A Design.

Back in the days when men were men and women were corseted, a quaint form of communication between the sexes sprang up. On the feminine side it was known as "fan language." Beruffled parasols, also, were a happy medium for expressing emotions in the days before word-signs became just a technical term in shorthand. Men, in their turn, responded via the florists—roses for love, petunias for sympathy. Alas, however, coy customs went out with WELCOME doormats and GOD BLESS OUR HOME samplers.

Anna Steese Richardson of the Woman's Home Companion recently declared that "women have passed through the tea-room stage and have developed a taste for red meat in restaurants and in their reading." She seems to think that in the race for survival of the fittest, steaks and stern realities have far outclassed ice-box cakes and lukewarm illusions. Perhaps she had in mind the women who went so far as to borrow men's dinner jackets for formal wear and who have long since been relaxing in shorts, slacks and divided skirts. Even the fedora was not safe, and the masculine jauntiness with which it was worn by sweet young things was a far cry from the subtle messages once transmitted by means of demure hats and provocative veils.

With the coming of spring, however, women again are dressing with a purpose. And the purpose in this case is peace. Printed chiffons and crepes are no longer enhanced by mere floral or imaginative designs but bear the word PAX in bold pattern. Sometimes the letters are incorporated in the material in definite succession. Again they are more or less disguised in weired formation. But, obvious or subtle, women will find more than a crusader's satisfaction in wearing them. And that is the age-old feminine streak which delights in finding a new way of wearing the heart on the sleeve.

Getting Together Again.

Although certain details have still to be settled, the prolonged and often suspended negotiations between the representatives of railway managements and the unions are reported to be nearing a satisfactory conclusion. The roads are said to be prepared to make liberal dismissal allowances to employes losing their positions as a result of mergers, consolidations or unification of facilities involving two or more carriers. The unions in return for such concessions will, it is assumed, cease to press for a legislative solution of the labor displacement problem.

In the absence of a voluntary agreement there was grave danger that Congress would yield to the importunities of the rail unions and pass the Wheeler-Crosser bill. That measure provides for compensation of employes displaced through reduction in the services or facilities of individual roads as well as those who lose their jobs because of inter-company consolidations. Furthermore, the roads would have to secure permission of the I. C. C. before making any changes affecting their employes. J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, asserts, indeed, that the bill would make it impossible for an individual road to close a station, discontinue a train, consolidate its mechanical facilities or in any way curtail its operations, without first obtaining the approval of the I. C. C.

The emergency transportation act of 1933, which expires next month, has hastened consideration of the problem presented by displaced labor. Employes on the pay rolls of the roads in May, 1933, have been protected against loss of their positions by this temporary measure. As a consequence of its restrictive provisions, which have limited the reduction in labor costs, the roads have been discouraged from pressing unification plans.

> Co-ordinator Eastman has strongly emphasized the advantage to railway employes as well as to the roads themselves of eliminating superfluous labor as a means of reducing operating costs. "Looking into the future," he said, in a recent public address, "and considering the competitive conditions by which the railroads will be confronted, I can foresee progress, development, increasing traffic and employment, provided, but only provided, they can make the adjustments necessary to meet these conditions. One of the essential adjustments is elimination of all unnecessary waste so that railroads can operate at the lowest possible reasonable cost. The sooner they get to work and do this, the better in the end for all concerned, including the employes."

By entering into voluntary agreements with their employes to make reasonable compensation to displaced workers, railway managements will have a greater incentive to improve the quality of their services and reduce operative costs. And railway labor will in the long run benefit by the enlarged employment opportunities resulting from an expansion of rail traffic. At the same time, a reasonable measure of protection against undue hardship will be afforded by the dismissal wages that the roads are willing to pay.

As Coordinator Eastman says, such payments are "a logical extension of the pension principle." Introduced at a time when traffic is increasing, they will not be a great financial strain upon the roads, and they can be adjusted to their ability to pay more easily than a scale of payments arbitrarily imposed by law or by bureaucratic decree.

Gold-Rush, 1936.

There is no news in the figurative April statement that

"The buttercups, bright-eyed and bold,
Hold up their chalices of gold."

But contagious emotion ought to emanate from the front-yard garden of Mr. Walter Muller—Borough of Queens, City of New York—for there Mr. Muller has come across a lode of real gold, right beside a crop of yellow jonquils. Yet how is the discovery received?

Time was when such an announcement moved whole populations to the aureate site. Lives were staked and lost in the succeeding scramble. Today, on the contrary, nobody even tries to jump the initial claim, and the modern Sutter just takes some sample earth to an assayer; gets his picture in the inside pages of the papers, and says he may, after all, use the site of his potential mine for the erection of a front porch, where, of a summer's evening, he can have a comfortable chat with his neighbors.

Perhaps the reason for this apathy lies in the minor fact that Mr. Muller's garden hasn't yet yielded enough of the precious ore to fill a tooth. Or is he postponing operations in the hope that his gold may soon be worth more in terms of 49 or 39 cent dollars?

According to Einstein, "The empirical quantum of the gravitation equation bridges the corpuscles of the material eschantology by subliminal energy evolved counter-clockwise out of analogous infinities." You may run out and play a while now.

The still, small voice of conscience rings in a loudspeaker when you get caught up with.

"Ethiopia Is Italian."

Letters To The Editor.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Results Of Conquest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Conquest of Ethiopia may do for Italy what Mark Antony's invasion and other European plunderers of Africa did for ancient Rome and Greece. Among the results of any international conquest, almost inevitably follows a biological aftermath of racial admixture.

In Rome, following a Carthaginian war, 70,000 African slaves were recorded in the population but in a century later the swarthy complexion and the curlier, darker hair of Italians were the only records of the enslaved people. The Moors were lost in Spain.

Mussolini, the freebooter and marauder of our day, is possibly thinking of Ethiopia as an environment in which to breed a more virile Italian race, more cannon fodder, and perhaps develop a spearhead of African revolution in African mandates and colonies. In a little while, conqueror and conquered will be friends, neighbors, husbands and wives. Then will history record conquest as a victory or a defeat for Rome.

E. B. HENDERSON.
Falls Church, Va., May 4.

The Orchestra Tangle.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have noted a letter in your columns today, signed by Fairfax Oyster, in which he says: "Washington has not now a symphony orchestra, it has only an association."

May I point out that Mr. Oyster is incorrect in saying that we do not have an orchestra now. We are at present, like the Boston, the Philadelphia, the Philharmonic, and other symphony orchestras, between seasons, and individual contracts have not been signed with musicians. We have been prevented from signing these contracts, however, only because of our controversy with Union officials—not over terms of pay or working conditions, but on personnel matters that we feel are vital to the continued artistic excellence of the orchestra.

May I also point out that the National Symphony Orchestra Association does have a record of five successful seasons of symphony orchestra concerts to its credit, and that it already has enrolled for next season approximately 700 members, with a total of more than 1,800 contributors.

C. C. CAPPEL,
Manager, National Symphony Orchestra Assn.
Washington, May 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a local amateur musician, and enjoying a familiarity with the "Symphony" situation, I feel that someone, perhaps better equipped than myself, should refute some statements made in the editorial in The Post headed "The Home Town Boys."

The question is not one of the importation of musicians, but the idea of keeping them from competing with local musicians in other engagements, a subject matter that is covered by national law of the American Federation of Musicians, and not local law.

As far as the personnel manager is concerned, no one can deny the union the right to enforce discipline within its own ranks.

I am constrained to point out an important fact. Many articles are referring to the orchestra as "Mr. Kindler's Orchestra" and the statement is continually made that Mr. Kindler came here and started this orchestra. This is emphatically not so. The orchestra was formed by a bunch of Washington musicians, and, after it was organized, Mr. Kindler was invited here to conduct. Musicians, however, are not usually good business men, and these original men were no exception, and they allowed the control of their orchestra to fall into the hands of people who, although they talk and write of "art," are much more interested in finance.

Even the title of your editorial was an affront to the local musicians, and it is my hope that the "Home Town Boys" (many of whom in the past have helped build up the subscription list of The Post) will regain control of their own destinies.

HARRY L. LEWIS.
Washington, May 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Truly the plans of our National Symphony Orchestra appear somewhat confusing. Having read many times in the various newspapers that no summer concerts were to be held and that our director was booked for European appearances, it is surprising to read that these concerts are now contemplated and it is quite evident that these changes have been made in an effort to prevent Mr. Yasha Bunchuk from presenting his proposed concerts.

In view of the fact that for the past four years residents of Washington in all walks of life have been harassed and annoyed beyond endurance by benefits of every description to obtain funds for the symphony, it appears time for someone with the proper financial backing and business ability to put the organization on a paying basis.

Those of your readers who refer to Mr. Bunchuk as an "unknown" are evidently unacquainted with the musical world outside of Washington. I have had the privilege of hearing Mr. Bunchuk in concert in various European capitals and in New York City, where he is recognized as one of the world's finest cellists and a director of outstanding ability.

As no funds are requested and our now unemployed musicians would have an opportunity to earn some greatly needed funds—just where does the objection arise? It is time for Washington residents to wake up and realize that a rare and unusual opportunity confronts them.

MRS. LA MOTTE HENNING.
Washington, May 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to thank you for the publicity you have given in The Post to furthering the efforts of the National Symphony Orchestra of the District.

I feel that what you are doing is helping to create in the minds of the children of Washington an appreciation of good music, and know that these concerts are of great value to their education.

LOUISE A. FRY, President,
District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers.
Washington, May 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why don't the newspapers get the facts straight before giving an opinion editorally?

Some of the people do know the correct story of the National Symphony impasse. In a case of this sort one side or the other is right, there can be no compromise of justice. After all, justice, humanity and happiness are more important than better music-making.

The musical union is trying to thwart the unjust conditions under which these of its members are subjected. Who would deny it to them if the facts were known?

After the National Symphony members were told there would no summer concerts, Mr. Bunchuk and his adherents appear and are trying to do a worthy mission. They are attempting to engage the symphony members, making it possible for them to earn something at this time, while also giving enjoyment to the music lovers of Washington in the summer.

I am sure this angle of the case is not known generally, for then praise would be Mr. Bunchuk's share instead of condemnation.

In answer to Mr. Potter and Mrs. Hesselback, let them, as the symphony men must, attempt to live on a 23-week salary, such as it is.

The Utterback Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The announcement by the Commonwealth's attorney in the matter of the abduction of the Utterback girl that his office had dropped the case, since her voluntary confession, is an example of the gross stupidity which had characterized the case ever since the first report of the abduction; and is a parallel of the inefficiency and negligence, almost criminal, which hampers law enforcement in the South.

Here is a case where a girl, who claimed to have been abducted, was discovered by two reporters who very conveniently had their camera along so as to take pictures which showed her tied in a manner in which it was manifestly impossible for her to have tied herself, and that she must, therefore, have had some assistance; yet the Commonwealth's attorney does not think this case needs any further probing.

For some unexplained reason the sheriff, it is said, either declined to accept, or failed to secure the cords by which she was bound, leaving room for speculation as to whether this was a case of forgetting how, just a few days before, in New York, a cord left at the scene of a murder had led to the arrest and confession of the murderer, or just one of gross stupidity.

This girl caused the humiliating arrest and inconvenience of two innocent men, one of whom, according to the news, in spite of statements of the girl's mother to the contrary, had been meeting her for some time before; and, as is usually the case, she had to make one of her abductors a Negro. Fortunately no Negro was arrested; for had one been arrested there might have been a lynching, since there is little likelihood that the same consideration would have been shown a colored suspect in Virginia as was shown those white men.

It is quite clear that this girl should be taught a lesson by being prosecuted. It is clear, also, that any responsible public official who would drop such a case without attempting to discover and prosecute the accomplice (or accomplices) is unfit for the position he holds. If for no other reason, this girl and her accomplices should be prosecuted for the expenses caused the county in the five days' search for her "abductors."

Hoover And The Press.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The attitude with respect to former President Hoover, which appears to have been taken by the press opposed to the New Deal, must be very satisfactory and comforting to the "New Dealers." For they no doubt realize that, so long as the opposition refuses to accept the principles and ideas of Hoover, including those relative to the tariff, they are only being bombarded with blank shells.

The erroneous and mischievous economic ideas of the insurgents or "medicine men," those who have been in, but not of the Republican Party, and who are now New Dealers—Norris, LaFollette, et al. and to a lesser extent, Borah—are largely responsible for the present plight of the party, and our country.

There are several millions of us who believe Hoover is everlastingly right; make no mistake about that. And we resent the aforesaid attitude of the press, or any candidate. It is conceded that it might not be "expedient" to nominate him, and that fact, and because he is not an avowed candidate, accounts for his "poor showing," which has been so extensively advertised. It may also account for the poor showing of both Knox and Borah in Illinois.

Hoover has offered the Republican Party its most effective ammunition. If it refuses to make use of it, or if (as Waltman says in The Post, May 2) the party is out of sympathy with him, then it will be, and ought to be defeated. For, unless there is a realization that it was the electorate, and not Hoover that was "found wanting," a foreign system of government—a sort of enlarged and camouflaged "Tammany machine," will continue to operate in the United States. The Post Impressionist

Mrs. George's Gilbert Stuart

Post Office, Thursday.

"GEORGETOWN the retrospective . . . held, shut in, with its lavender and pressed-rose memories, . . . whose visible distinction seems to speak audibly in the church-bells on Sunday morning, and breathes not only in the soft air, but in the perfume of every gentle, old-fashioned rose that blooms behind the garden walls . . . Georgetown, who, from her pensive porticoes, looks over her river, brooding with memories!

"Were she mine, how I should love her!"

It is Owen Wister, of course, who is speaking in his best book—not "The Virginian," which everybody knows—"Lady Baltimore," which everybody ought to know. Equally of course, we have cut out the name "King's Port" and substituted the name "Georgetown."

Wister wrote of "King's Port," meaning Charleston.

But he might have written as truly in the same vein of Georgetown. Even many of Vernon Howe Bailey's drawings of King's Port might have been made in Georgetown.

There are only a few such places left: relics of a republic that was quieter and simpler than our republic of today. Kinder, too, perhaps—and, oh, how calmly unhurried!

There's Beacon Hill, in Boston. There are bits of Germantown, in Philadelphia. There are some such towns as Dover, Del., whereof we spoke a day or two ago. And Savannah. And parts of New Orleans. Not many more.

Yet, because they are so few, these islets in a rising flood, they become, to the general eye, more and more like one another.

You may quite safely substitute "Georgetown" for "King's Port."

You live in Washington?

You are living, at a time of immense national interest, in the most interesting city of the United States. For these United States are undergoing a tremendous transformation, and the transformation is being wrought here in Washington. You can hear the plans being made. You can see them put into operation.

And then you can cross an invisible line and enter an intangible difference: a line which, nevertheless, is a Wall of Division; and a difference which, nevertheless, is as great as the differences between planets.

You must understand that, by "Georgetown," this Columnist doesn't mean those portions of Georgetown devoted to enterprise and vowed to modernity—doesn't mean the ambitious portions of Georgetown. Their devotion is rewarded. They keep their vow, achieve their ambition.

Notwithstanding, they themselves nurse a fine pride in the background wherefrom they stand out so prominently. Doesn't it help them, ever so much, to stand out? However great the dissimilarity, they wouldn't have the background conform to them—if they could help it!

Nor, you may be sure, would the backgrounders.

The trouble is that neither element can help it.

Some months ago—late last autumn or early last winter—the rumbling rumor came, like the whirring of enemy bombing planes. The streets of Georgetown—we are aware of the metaphor-mixture, but consider Georgetown's confusion—those streets were to be sacrificed on the high altar of the heathen god Traffic.

Georgetown folk knew what this meant. It meant the turning of their quiet residential ways, lined by old and memorable houses, into speedways.

And the coming of the speedways would spell the exit of the old houses—and all for which they stood.

Consider the case of P and Q streets. You know them. You remember the case? Well, then, *re*consider it. A "great central speedway" would run up the one street and down the other. The first step of progress would be the ripping away of the symbolic Belgian blocks on P street, replacing them by whatever material suits a speedway.

Well, the residents had a dinner and protested to the Commissioners, formed a committee and protested—protested by a dozen methods. At first, the Commissioners would do nothing; but at last, it seems, they have made this concession: "We shan't, after all, rip up your symbolic Belgian blocks; we shall merely cover them with macadam, concrete and asphalt. Now aren't you happy?" . . .

We dreamed that Mrs. George of Georgetown, owned a Gilbert Stuart portrait of her great-great-grandmother as a girl, with powdered hair and flounces. And she wept when a Commissioner told her she must let a PWAP artist paint a PWAP lady on that sacred canvas. But the Commissioner comforted her—showed her the folly of her tears. Said he:

"We're not going to destroy your Gilbert Stuart ancestress. We're only going to cover her up. You'll always have the precious knowledge that she is still with you, separated merely by a layer or two of the best paint money can buy."

counties and cities. Members of the boards would be residents of the communities in which they operate.

Retains Supervision.

Under this plan Hopkins would retain general supervision, but would have nothing to do with the appointment of State and local administrators.

Another suggestion by Bacon is that the bill be amended to provide jail sentences for anyone convicted of using relief money for political purposes.

A third suggestion was that State and local governments be required to supply at least 25 per cent of their relief money. Bacon pointed out that with the exception of 13 Southern States, contributions from States now run from 25 per cent to 62 per cent. Some of the Southern States are contributing less than 1 per cent. Under this plan State contributions would not be limited to 25 per cent, but could be fixed as high as the President thinks necessary.

Other Republicans are suggesting an amendment to provide that the money be turned over to the States in lump sums, eliminating Government control entirely. This plan is the one suggested by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan. The Republican statement following last night's conference indicated support of this proposal.

Suggest Reductions.

Republicans made it plain that they are not opposing a large relief appropriation, although some of them, particularly Representative Taber, of New York, suggested that the amount proposed could be considerably reduced. From another Republican source it was suggested that an amendment be proposed restoring the $75,000,000 cut and at the same time demanding elimination of political control.

It appeared certain that the Democratic bloc asking for earmarking of a substantial sum for the Public Works Administration would not receive unanimous Republican support, although leaders of the movement are expecting a considerable number of votes from the minority party.

An attempt will be made tonight to bind the Democratic caucus to support of the earmarking proposal. The Democratic bloc favoring this plan is headed by Representative Beiter, of New York.

Compromise Agreed.

The group is asking that $700,000,000 of the entire appropriation go to the Ickes organization, but it has agreed that a compromise on $400,000,000 will be satisfactory.

Beiter said yesterday that his petition asking for the earmarking had been signed by 145 Democrats and 14 Republicans. In addition, he said, there were 22 Democrats who believed that the entire appropriation should be earmarkekd and 67 Democrats who approve the movement, but who made a practice of not signing petitions.

The call for the caucus was signed yesterday by Representative Taylor (Democrat), Colorado, caucus chairman, in a hospital, where he is ill. A chairman of the caucus will be chosen when it meets. Speaker Byrns indicated that he will attend.

Browning's Optimism

By William Lyon Phelps

Good Over Evil

Today, the seventh of May, is the birthday of Robert Browning, who was born at London in 1812.

Much of nineteenth century poetry is pessimistic; Browning was an optimist, which is why his poems have inspired so many thousands of readers, and why he has been so often attacked by fastidious critics.

* * * *

In considering his optimism, it is only fair to him to consider its basis—why was Browning an optimist? He was an optimist because he believed in God and in the future life. He believed that the Central Energy which created and supplies the universe was Love; and that men and women have the principle of development, which means that human beings are made for eternity, and that they will continue their development after physical death. If Browning had not believed in God and immortality, he would not have been an optimist. For although he himself enjoyed life, he said repeatedly, that so far as this world is concerned, sorrow and pain are greatly in excess of happiness and pleasure. His optimism, then, is based on a firmly-held belief in the ultimate triumph of good over evil.

* * * *

It seem to me that he was not nearly so great an optimist as are some scientific men and philosophers. For there are certainly some scientists and philosophers and writers who believe that man is only an animal, that there is no such thing as soul or even personality, that mind is wholly dependent on the brain, that not only is every human being a transient and unimportant accident, but that even the world itself may be so described. Now I do not criticise adversely any person who holds such views, if he really believes them. But it seems to me that persons who hold such views and still regard life and the human race and the world with cheerfulness and delight, are such tremendous, wholesale, supreme optimists, as to go far beyond any conceivable optimism of Browning's. Such men are the unqualified optimists.

The Editorial Policy of The Post

Realization of His Hopes for Paper Told by Eugene Meyer.

The editorial policy of The Washington Post was described in a radio speech last night by the publisher, Eugene Meyer, as "rational, realistic and critical."

Mr. Meyer's talk was made in a program broadcast by Radio Station WMAL, honoring Felix Morley, editor of The Post, who was awarded one of two Pulitzer prizes for "distinguished editorial writing."

The other award for outstanding editorial writing went to George B. Parker, of the Scripps-Howard newspapers.

After telling of the policy and purposes of The Post, Mr. Meyer introduced Mr. Morley, who in turn, discussed the editorial page.

The Post staff, Mr. Meyer said, is proud of Mr. Morley and of the honor conferred upon him.

"We like to feel on The Post," Mr. Meyer added, "that the fine talent, high courage and honest independence in his writing that have won for him this latest distinction, are all reflected in every activity, department and policy of the paper."

Mr. Morley told of the efforts of The Post to uphold the guarantees of liberty.

"We all of us know, finally and fundamentally," he declared, "that freedom of speech, freedom of education, freedom of the press, are the essential guarantees of that liberty without which a nation is only a hollow shell, regardless of the size of its army, the extent of its territory or the millions of poor sheep-like helots which it may harbor."

Mr. Meyer Talks On Aims of The Post.

Mr. Meyer's address follows:

As many of you already know, one of the two Pulitzer prizes given this year for editorial excellence has been awarded to Mr. Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post. Under the terms fixed by the Pulitzer Foundation, the award is "for distinguished editorial writing during the year, limited to the editorial page, the test of excellence being clearness of style, moral purpose, sound reasoning and power to influence public opinion in what the writer conceives to be the right direction, due account being taken of the whole volume of the writer's editorial work during the year."

Naturally, all of us who have been working together on The Post during the last two and a half years are very happy at this recognition. It comes from a jury passing on the editorial performance of the larger and more important newspapers throughout the country, a jury composed of authorities experienced and highly respected for their ability to judge the merits of newspapers in the various departments of journalism.

Mr. Morley is a guest on the Postilion program tonight and I have asked him to speak to you on the general subject of the editorial page.

But, before I turn the microphone over to him, I will take a few minutes to re-state here what I said in The Post the night I took possession of the property two weeks after its purchase at public sale in June, 1933. This is the statement I made at that time:

"It will be my aim and purpose steadily to improve The Post and to make it an even better paper than it has been in the past. It will be conducted as an independent paper devoted to the best interests of the people of Washington and vicinity, and hopes to have their interest and support."

Two years ago, at a meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, consisting of a hundred of the editors of the more prominent papers throughout the land, I attempted to outline the editorial policy of our paper up to that time and to indicate our point of view for the future development of the editorial page. In addressing the editors, I said among other things:

Criticism Seeks To Be Constructive.

"The editorial policy of The Post has been rational, realistic, and critical, but its criticism has aimed to be of a constructive nature. We have sought scrupulously to avoid a vindictive or a partisan note. The basis of our editorial policy is a philosophy of human conduct and of democratic government as established by certain tested principles which we consider distinctly American.

"We are firmly convinced that individual initiative is essential to progress and that society should be organized to further that individual self-expression. We concede that individualism may lead to social injustice and even to tyranny and must therefore be subject to governmental controls. But we insist that such controls can only be effective among our people when they are self-exercised. The establishment of such controls must remain a means to an end, never an end in itself. The end is always individual freedom, exercised not at the expense of others, but in the interests of society and for the constructive development of the individual.

"In the light of these fundamental principles we have never hesitated to test the numerous and often startling measures which have been originated at our seat of Government. An analysis of our editorial columns will show that on the whole we have supported as many, if not more, Administration measures as we have opposed, and if there is any feeling in Washington or elsewhere that The Post is an anti-Administration paper, that feeling is due to the fact that such criticisms as we have made stood out with an undue emphasis in a country where temporarily almost all criticism, however rational, has been quenched." This was true at the time, April, 1934.

"But for the very reason that we believe in the maximum of personal freedom which is compatible with the public interest, The Post is unfriendly to the policy of extreme Federal regimentation of the present Administration, not only on principle, but also on the practical grounds that such policies of overdeveloped Federal control cannot be enforced.

"As a balanced budget is a prime necessity, we are opposed to unlimited and careless spending of public funds. We have emphasized the danger of rapidly mounting debts both to sound currency and sound credit.

"In the agricultural field I believe that Jonathan Swift was right when he said in Gulliver's Travels: 'Whoever could make two ears of corn, or two blades of grass, to grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before would deserve better of mankind, and do more essential service to his country than the whole race of politicians put together.' This is still true in spite of temporary maladjustments. Such maladjustments have occurred before and will occur again no matter how much economic planning is established, but I do not believe, and do not propose to accept, the doctrine that there can be greater wealth for the individual when our total wealth has been reduced. A better working of the machinery of distribution is needed, not a curtailment of the aggregate product."

Recalls Words on Deceitful Legislation.

Continuing my address to the editors, I stated that The Post was opposed to legislation put forward ostensibly for one purpose while deceitfully establishing powers for other purposes; that we recognized that with the maturing of a more complex social structure, social responsibilities of the State are necessarily widened.

Continuing the quotation, I said: "The Post believes that we should follow in the future, as we have in the past, the traditions and the type of institutions that have been characteristic of the English-speaking peoples. We do not believe that traditions and institutions developed on the continent of Europe, especially in Germany and Russia, are suitable to the American conditions and people.

"In foreign relations we are neither for extreme nationalism nor extreme internationalism, neither of which we have ever had or ever can have.

"The Post has repeatedly emphasized the glaring contradictions in the Administration program because such conflicts are bound to impede the progress of recovery, to say nothing of the confusion which they create in the public mind.

Honest Criticism Held Inalienable.

"Perhaps the greatest service which The Post has tried to render the country and the press in the past few months lay in our constant assumption that honest criticism of public action is the inalienable right of all American citizens and is the special obligation of a free press. Never once, however, have we stooped to criticism for the sake of mere opposition.

"Great loyalty has been shown by the people and by the press to the present Administration. The responsibility of this Administration is therefore all the greater not to abuse that confidence and loyalty, but to exercise unusual care to be responsive to the trust that has been reposed in it."

That was our program in April, 1934. That has been our policy for two years. It remains substantially our program for the future.

Our interest in national and international problems, however, does not for a moment mean that we ignore the very important local interests of Washingtonians. Just because it is not a self-governing community, Washington, more than any other American city, greatly needs the assistance of a vigilant press in the solution of its municipal problems. In our news columns as well as in our editorial treatment, The Post aims to expose abuses, to forward constructive reforms and to assist the health, happiness and well-being of our fellow Washingtonians to the fullest extent of which an alert, intelligent and well-informed newspaper is capable.

We would fail in the most fundamental of our ambitions if we were negligent in applying the general principles of which I have spoken to such matters as the preservation of academic freedom in the District of Columbia, to the improvement of our backward health conditions, to local housing, slum clearance, recreational facilities and other issues of an economic, political and cultural nature. In building The Washington Post I have realized from the outset that we are charged with a local as well as with a national responsibility. We could never succeed in the latter if we were deficient in the former.

Again, let me say how proud we are of our editor and of this honor that has been bestowed upon him. We like to feel on The Post that the fine talent, high courage and honest independence in his writing, that have won for him this latest distinction, are all reflected in every activity, department and policy of the paper.

Mr. Morley Cites Editorial 'Motivation.'

Mr. Morley's address follows:

The director of an editorial page seldom escapes from blessed anonymity. Even less often is he called upon to make a public accounting of his failings, whether of commission or omission. Nevertheless it would probably be better for American journalism if such a stock-taking were made periodically. So I welcome this opportunity to discuss with you, however briefly, what the psychologists would call the "motivation" of our editorial page.

Mr. Meyer has outlined the general principles upon which we operate and to hear them again takes me back to the day, now two and a half years ago, when he and I discussed at length my taking the position I now hold. Since that time, by the good old process of trial and error, we have worked out a very harmonious relationship. And since this is an occasion on which he cannot interrupt me, I'll tell you why. The publisher of The Washington Post is a man who believes in the value of principles. If more of our newspaper owners had similar ideals, the competition for the Pulitzer Prize in editorial writing would be so stiff that I doubt whether I should now be sharing the honor with Mr. George B. Parker, of the Scripps-Howard chain.

But it is one thing to be assured of the support of your publisher in hewing to the line, let chips fall where they may, and quite another to determine the line along which hewing should be done. Under the conditions of our civilization, so badly shaken by the World War and its aftermath, the lines often seem to be not a pattern but a hopelessly tangled skein.

As a single illustration, let me take those much-abused classifications: liberal and reactionary. A good many people used to think that a liberal is one who favors an extension of power by the state, of course in behalf of the interests of the common man. Shortly after the war, when I lived for a time in Berlin, a German Socialist friend of mine, a splendid old fellow, defined the term "liberal" to me in practically those words. Now Germany has a national Socialist government which has certainly extended state controls, and claims to have done so in the interest of the average German. With greater or less distinction we see the same philosophy operating in Russia and Italy. But few of us will call it a liberal trend. With very good reason we consider such an extension of governmental powers reactionary, for they take us back to the autocratic methods of the distant past.

Civilization's Changing Periods.

Let me put it another way. Anyone who has read any history must realize that civilization is always either going forward or slipping back. On the whole, of course, there has been an enormous advance. But there have been long periods, such as the so-called Dark Ages, when decline and even collapse in widespread areas were much more pronounced than progress.

The man who digs his feet in the ground and refuses to move forward in an up-swing of civilization is clearly a reactionary. But the man who digs his feet in the ground and refuses to be pulled back in a down-swing period may be the very reverse of reactionary. The more chaotic that age, the more dangerous is a thoughtless use of labels. That is why we proudly proclaim, at the head of our editorial page every day, that we are "An Independent Newspaper."

It follows from our independent position that every issue on which editorial comment is made should be examined from a detached and objective viewpoint. The examination must be made in relation to the general picture of the times in which we live, but it should be without relation to any preconceived position or attitude. We do not accept the theory that every innovation is necessarily desirable. Nor do we accept the theory that what is must be good. We do endeavor to bring an unbiased critical faculty to the editorial examination of that which seems most important in the constantly shifting kaleidoscope of human activities.

We try to keep our eyes on far horizons, but we also try to keep our feet on the ground. For while we can dream dreams and see visions with the best of them, we try to remember, for instance, that a practical slum clearance program in Washington means more to us here than 10,000 airy castles in Spain.

Not long ago one of our readers told me that he likes our editorial page not because he habitually agrees with the position we take, but because he is never quite sure in advance what our position is going to be and is therefore always curious to find out.

I was more pleased than surprised by the remark because it reflected something which I regard as very significant about The Post. At our daily editorial conference I generally do not know, myself, in advance of discussion, what our conclusions are going to be. We believe in the theory of democracy and we apply it in formulating our editorials. Every member of my staff is called upon for any special knowledge or background which he or she can contribute to the group discussion and out of a well-rounded survey our attitude is formulated.

All that takes time. It would be a whole lot easier to follow the methods used by a friend of mine who used to be city editor on a labor paper. One evening there was a smash between a Packard and a Ford. So he tossed the news account to the copy desk with instructions to "put a class angle on this." But when you order any particular angle on editorial comment you automatically eliminate that critical faculty on which we have got to rely for any real solution of our problems, local, national or international.

It is not by accident that our editorial attitude is critical, though I hope always tempered by a sincere effort to ascertain all the essential facts before we hit out in any direction. And I would suggest to you that a newspaper whose editorial policy is based on adherence to principle, and directed by a desire to analyze, cannot possibly be either partisan or opportunist. It is necessarily independent. It may seem reactionary one day; radical another. In fact it is seeking consistently to examine and assess changing situations in the light of unvarying principles. Such intellectual integrity is vital to the press of a free people. It is particularly vital in the case of a newspaper located at the seat of our Federal Government.

I have been speaking of our ideals. None can be more conscious than I am of the extent to which we daily fall short of our objectives. We have made blunders of analysis and we have not always been correct in our facts, though I may say that we strive exceedingly hard for factual accuracy. I do not believe in excusing failure. But I would observe that anyone who thinks it is easy to examine the panorama of the day without occasional errors had better try the job before he is too severe on those who do.

Critical Faculty Editorial Essential.

We ought to be accurate. Theoretically we ought never to make a factual mistake in the editorial columns of The Post. Our editorial writers have an advantage which is not shared by the newspapers of any other city in the country. Whenever there is a question of the implications of a policy, of the attitude of an official, or even of events in any foreign country, it is always possible for us in Washington to secure an authoritative explanation by a local phone call or a visit to a responsible official. It sounds easy, and so it is if you only make one phone call. But if you are very careful, and call two officials, you will likely have two authoritative explanations, each contradicting the other. And that's another reason for exercising the critical faculty.

Even when thus confused, however, we do not feel lost. We know, just as you know, that certain principles hold true eternally, regardless of argument about details. We all of us know, for instance, that governments, like men, must pay their way as they go, or in the long run risk disaster. We all of us know that if a government plans to extend the sphere of its activities successfully it must concentrate upon obtaining the trained personnel, the professional civil service, which can be relied upon to do the job satisfactorily. We all of us know, finally and fundamentally, that freedom of speech, freedom of education, freedom of the press, are the essential guarantees of that liberty without which a nation is only a hollow shell, regardless of the size of its army, the extent of its territory or the millions of poor sheep-like helots which it may harbor.

It is often said that the editorial page in our newspapers is going downhill; that it has become sloppy in style and thought; cowardly or bigoted in attitude and generally fatuous in expression. There have been days, too many of them, when our own editorial page on The Post has seemed to me to confirm that judgment. But by and large I think the condemnation is unjust. I think the editorial pages in many of our newspapers are steadily improving and that they compare very favorably with the products of those semimythical editors of the past whose names are always uttered with reverence, but whose writings don't stand the test of time too well, if you take the trouble to look up what they really said, as I have often done.

On The Post, at least, we believe we have an editorial page with real possibilities. Those of you who think it desirable that these possibilities be fulfilled can help us to do so. The criticism which we apply to others we greatly need ourselves. And let me say in closing that those volunteer correspondents who help us most are very frequently those who tell us frankly just where we slip and why.

I thank you. For editors, as well as for exalted personages, an open confession is good for the soul.

Business Machines Head Paid $303,813

By the Associated Press.

The International Business Machines Corporation, New York, reported to the Securities Commission yesterday that in 1935 it paid its president, Thomas J. Watson, $303,813, compared with $365,358 in 1934.

Watson's 1934 salary was the highest paid an industrialist that year, according to commission records, and indications to date were that he would be top paid for 1935. William Randolph Hearst, publisher, topped Watson in 1934 as the highest paid business executive, receiving, according to Treasury reports to the House, $500,000.

Watson's 1935 remuneration included a $195,724 bonus for that year and also a $7,232 bonus adjustment for 1934. In 1934 Watson received a $264,432 bonus on 1933 business and $157,732 bonus for 1934.

Fletcher Plans Big Ceremony Of Notification for Nominee

ington manager, said that the results "only reflected a portion of Gov. Landon's true strength in the State."

Calls Results Staisfactory.

His statement also said:

"Tuesday's results are certainly generally satisfactory to those interested in the nomination of Gov. Landon.

"The outcome in South Dakota is extremely gratifying, for it reflects the sentiment of the voters uninfluenced by any extensive campaign on behalf of Gov. Landon and is a true indication of the esteem in which he and his administration are held by the citizens of surrounding States.

"Tennessee delegates at large go to Cleveland instructed for Gov. Landon, and this result, together with action heretofore taken in district conventions in that State and in Kentucky and Virginia, would seem to indicate that further favorable action may be expected in other Southern States."

Choice of Majority, Belief.

Representative McGrath, California Democrat, called the Roosevelt victory there "significant." Roosevelt polled more votes, he said, than did all his Democratic and Republican opponents.

In Alabama, the President received all the State's 22 Democratic delegates, while Senator and Representative Bankhead, brothers, who introduced the cotton control bill to supplement AAA cotton activities, were assured of return to Congress.

Georgia Democrats who favor the President's re-election announced they had raised the $10,000 fee to enter him in the State primary June 3. Gov. Eugene Talmadge, New Deal foe, still was silent on whether he would enter the Presidential race, but he assailed the Administration today for what he called "illegal" Federal purchase of Georgia land.

After saying he was satisfied with the California result, Landon said:

"What we must have is a nominee who is a choice of the majority of Republicans as ascertained from the opportunities they have had to express themselves."

Gov. Frank F. Merriam, in a statement, declared, "I am still for Gov. Landon and I have no apologies or regrets. However, it is time now to forget factional differences in the party and present a united front for the general campaign."

Fletcher, G. O. P. chairman, said in another statement last night that the National Committee "attaches no particular significance to the statement by William Green that he favored Mr. Roosevelt."

The American Federation of Labor president said on Tuesday that he favored the President's re-election.

"The American Federation of Labor is non-partisan," Fletcher said.

Always a Democrat.

"Its members and officers can be for whom they please, and always are. There is no more news in the statement of Mr. Green, who has always been a Democrat, than there would be if Tugwell should announce that he was a "New Dealer."

Regarding the notification ceremonies, Fletcher said:

"Strange as it may seem, I approve the precedent established by Mr. Roosevelt in going to the convention to receive the notification of his nomination.

"I am making tentative plans for holding the ceremonies connected with the notification of the Republican candidates for President and Vice President at the stadium in Cleveland as soon as possible after the nominations are made.

Depends on Candidates.

"Whether these plans will be carried out will depend entirely on the desires of the successful candidates.

"Provisional arrangements have been made at Cleveland for the use of the stadium in case it should be wanted for the notification. The stadium has a seating capacity of over 80,000 and is conveniently situated.

"Holding the ceremonies in the stadium will enable many people to attend who cannot, on account of limited space, procure tickets to the convention."

On Saturday, Georgia, Idaho and Washington will have Republican State conventions.

Suggests Coalition.

Topeka, Kans., May 6 (AP).—Paul Block, publisher of a chain of Eastern newspapers, advocated in a statement issued here tonight a coalition ticket of "anti-New Dealers," headed by Gov. Alf M. Landon for President and former Gov. Joseph B. Ely, of Massachusetts, for Vice President.

Block, on his way East from a short vacation in California, stopped here for a visit with the Kansas Governor, a Republican.

"I have not changed my mind that President Roosevelt can be defeated," the publisher said, "because I am definitely convinced that there are more people against the New Deal philosophy than the number who favor it.

Hails Landon Victory.

"But that means that all those against the New Deal must be gotten together. I personally hope there will be a coalition ticket, with Gov. Landon for Presiden. and former Gov. Ely of Massachusetts, a Jeffersonian Democrat, for Vice President.

"If that can't be arranged, and selfish politicians may prevent it, I think a winning ticket would be Gov. Landon for President and Senator Borah for Vice President."

Block, commenting on the California Presidential primary in which an uninstructed delegation defeated one pledged to Gov. Landon, said:

"Considering there were so many who fought Gov. Merriam and William Randolph Hearst, both of whom happened to be supporting Gov. Landon, I think the California primary a great victory for Gov. Landon.

"Now that the fight against Merriam and Hearst is ended, I think we will find most of the delegates voting for Landon at Cleveland."

Republican 14 Years.

By the United Press.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace revealed yesterday that he had been registered as a Republican for 14 years without realizing it.

He said, in answering correspondents' questions, that the matter had been called to his attention by an Iowa Democratic State committeewoman, and that he and Mrs. Wallace both had promptly signed necessary papers to become registered Democrats.

"But I don't feel any different than I did back in 1922," he added, "when I realized that I no longer could countenance belonging to any political party advocating high tariffs for the United States, a creditor Nation."

Curley to Seek Senate.

Boston, May 6 (U.P.).—Gov. James M. Curley of Massachusetts announced in a radio speech tonight that he had definitely decided to become a candidate for the United States Senate in the November election.

Curley, elected Governor in 1934, will seek the seat of Senator Marcus A. Coolidge, whose term expires in 1937. Coolidge, a Democrat, has not formally announced he would run again.

Curley said he would not seek renomination to his present office because:

"Under the circumstances, greatly as I might desire to serve the people of my native State, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, who have dealt with me so generously many times under most trying conditions, the path of duty is clearly defined * * *."

Curley remained aloof from the fight.

Borah Avoids Idaho Seat.

Gooding, Idaho, May 6 (AP).—John Thomas, Idaho Republican leader and former United States Senator, said today that Senator William E. Borah has advised that he "prefers" not to serve as an Idaho State delegate to the Republican National Convention.

"I presume his wishes will be respected at our State delegate convention in Moscow next Saturday," Thomas said, adding:

"Undoubtedly, our delegation of eight will be sent to Cleveland instructed to work for Senator Borah's nomination for President so long as there appears to be any chance."

New Tax Bill Assailed

from stockholders would go to the Federal Government in taxes."

Speaking with a slight English accent, May, robust but white-haired, urged the committee at least to clear up to its own satisfaction the apparent "confusion" in Treasury testimony.

For his own part, he said, he did not "find the statistics presented any ground for believing that this law, if adopted, will permanently increase the revenue."

He said that furthermore he did not think the Treasury had made sufficient allowance for the increase in revenue likely to result from improved business volume.

Says Change Unnecessary.

"I believe that without changing the law, you will get pretty close to the $600,000,000 the President seeks to raise from the new tax," May testified, adding that, in his opinion, there is "not sufficient fiscal advantage to justify this change."

At another point, he echoed the views of Arthur A. Ballantine, former Republican Undersecretary of the Treasury, that the proposed tax might have a serious effect on the Nation's economic structure.

May said the Treasury had "exaggerated" the problem of tax avoidance, first, by a misunderstanding of its own statistics, and second, by treating retention of surplus as tax avoidance.

For the first time since hearings opened, committee members, judging from their questioning, appeared to be weighing substantial revision of the bill.

Fred Sargent, president of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Co., now in trusteeship, asked the committee to make the 15 per cent preferential rate accorded companies in receivership, applicable for a period of five years after reorganization.

Sargent said that under court order, Chicago & Northwestern is obliged to file a reorganization plan by next June 27.

"If we are to reorganize on a secure and sound basis in the interest of the public welfare," he said, "since we are a quasi-public organization, we must build up the cash surplus sufficient to meet ordinary capital requirements for additions and betterments, provide for a working capital, and create a reasonable sinking fund. Until this is done it would be unwise * * * to distribute earnings as dividends.

Indications that testimony laid before the committee is beginning to leave an impression appeared when Chairman Pat Harrison asked Sargent if new industries would be benefited by, say, a 5-year exemption before the full force of the new levies was felt. Sargent said it would, but asked that old corporations which survived the depression not be penalized.

Connally Questions Him.

Again, Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, asked Sargent whether moderate raises in present corporate levies, and a tax on top of this to induce earnings distribution without "wrecking" them, would be helpful. Sargent did not commit himself on this proposal.

Another railroad witness, R. V. Fletcher, general counsel of the American Association of Railroads, advanced virtually the same recommendations for additional railroad exemptions from the proposed earnings tax, he laid before the House Ways and Means Committee. He stressed the need for building up sinking funds before computing the proposed corporate earnings tax.

Charging the proposed tax program is "communistic in spirit," C. J. Ewing, of Chicago, president of the Single Tax League, declared it proposed to confiscate wealth through the seizure of corporation earnings in order that the revenue might be distributed later to other citizens. This, he said, is a fundamental Communist doctrine. If $800,000,000 in new revenue is needed, he said, it can be obtained by eliminating that amount of wasteful spending.

Mystery Play Presents Deft Twists of Plot

'Ex-Mrs. Bradford, Now at Keith's, Dares to Be Different.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE EX-MRS. BRADFORD." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by James Edward Grant, adapted to the screen by Anthony Veiller, co-starring William Powell and Jean Arthur, with James and Lucile Gleason, Eric Blore, Robert Armstrong, Lila Lee, Grant Mitchell, Frank Reicher, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Ralph Morgan, Frank M. Thomas, Frankie Darro, Charles Richman, John Sheehan and Paul Fix. Directed by Stephen Roberts. Previewed Monday, May 4.

So the jockey falls off the favorite, dead, and the 4-to-1 shot steps down in front. Nick Martel, the bookmaker, pays off a hundred grand on the winner, ostensibly to Mike North, trainer and mentor of the dead jockey. Then Doc Bradford opens his front door, in response to a ring, and in tumbles Mike North's dead body. The jock and Mike both reveal symptoms of having died from strangulation, asphyxiation, drowning, or something of the sort, the only mark on either body being a thin splotch of gelatine, clinging to the skin. People rarely drown on the backs of race horses or in the corridors of fashionable apartment houses!

Then, in keeping a rendezvous with he doesn't know quite what, Dr. Bradford accidentally turns up another corpse, in the defunct person of Lou Pender. Symptoms the same.

Now all you have to do to solve the murder mystery angles of "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford," which opened yesterday on the screen at RKO-Keith's, is to make up your mind who killed whom, and then prove it. It's as simple as that!

Comedy Races With Mystery.

But while all this is going on, there is a corollary of brittle comedy and brisk colloquy that concerns the marital status of Dr. and Mrs. Bradford, once divorced, but about to be married again, according to the crisp and amusingly catty Ex-Mrs. Bradford. The comic and the mysterious ramifications of the screen play are intertwined throughout the development of the baffling plot, and, once or twice, get so seriously tangled as to nullify the effectiveness of both. These occurrences, however, are rare. For the most part, "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford" moves spiritedly, sagaciously and amusingly toward a final climax and denouement that are exciting, novel and wholly unexpected.

The closing sequences of the picture are enlivened by a horse race that possesses most of the nerve-tingling qualities that wrote "Broadway Bill" down in the hit column. Especially is the story's denouement notable for a fadeout scene that is highly ludicrous, even if it happens not to be strictly legal.

Naturally, all of this would come to practically nothing if not competently and breezily played. As a matter of fact, it is rather more than that. William Powell, as Dr. Bradford, fashionable physician, trapped into attempting a little sleuthing by the former ball-and-chain who has a penchant for writing mystery yarns, is happily met in the principal male role, and Jean Arthur, as his one-time better 51 per cent, adds still further to her standing as a light comedienne of assured manner and method, already made reasonably secure by her work opposite Gary Cooper in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" and other recent assignments.

The supporting cast is formidable with big "names," a reasonably complete roster of which will be found in the small-type paragraph preceding these observations upon one of the season's better frolics.

Gleason Is Off Key.

Jimmy Gleason, as a police inspector, sounds the only out-of-key notes piped off by any member of the cast—the author's fault, not his. Robert Armstrong, an old associate of Gleason on both stage and screen, is perfect as Martel, the bookie, and Frank M. Thomas, a new recruit from the living theater, making his debut in celluloid, acquits himself well as North. Eric Blore, Lila Lee, Ralph Morgan, Frankie Darro, Grant Mitchell and Frank Reicher are among the others who do most for the integrity of the film in roles that range from leads to bits.

James Edward Grant's story is an original and clever one, which Director Stephen Roberts permits to lag a little in the beginning, but whips up into a fine flurry of action and excitement to come under the wire a winner in a Garrison finish.

Gene Austin, in one of RKO-Radio's "Headliner" series, "Bad Medicine," a two-reel subject; a short-reel dealing with "Football Bugs," one of Columbia's "Color Rhapsodies," and the Pathe News, featuring the Dionne Quintuplets in some of their more diverting moments, are the auxiliary attractions supplementing a feature that dares to stroll gaily off the beaten track of stereotyped mystery-comedy and kick up a little dust of its own.

Hollywood Stars, Sport Fans, to Start Track

Los Angeles, May 6 (AP).—Bing Crosby and other Hollywood sports enthusiasts soon will own their own horse racing track if plans announced today are carried out.

Formal articles of incorporation for the Del Mar Turf Club were filed with the Secretary of State at Sacramento, with capital stock of $250,000. Directors named are Harry L. (Bing) Crosby, jr., his brother, Everett N. Crosby; Pat O'Brien, Oliver Hardy and Lloyd Bacon, film director.

Georgetown Drills.

Lieut. Col. William E. Brougher, conducting the War Department inspection at Georgetown University this week, will put the Infantry Battalion through its paces at 2 o'clock this afternoon on the Hilltop Field. The outcome of the week's inspection will decide Georgetown's R. O. T. C. rating in the Third Corps Area.

About The Showshops

SINCE he is no more than human, after all, it was probably inevitable that Walter Hampden should have weakened in the face of the barrage of protests that reached him from all points of the compass, following his announcement that this season was his last in the role of Cyrano in the Brian Hooker English version of Edmond Rostand's heroic comedy of "Cyrano de Bergerac," acting rights to which he owns.

NELSON B. BELL.

While Washington presumably will be omitted from the new itinerary, it is being bruited about among the cognoscenti that next season will find Mr. Hampden once more "on the road" with the flamboyant play of the duelist-poet-lover, with the prodigious proboscis and the unrequited passion for Roxanne. This time, the tour will take him into the South, where he has not recently been, and, eventually, to the Pacific Coast, where he has not played Cyrano for a period of some four or five years.

As was foreseen when Hampden recently played "Cyrano" at the National, it is difficult for an actor to abandon a part in which he has appeared something over 1,000 times, before more than 1,500,000 people to gross receipts of something in the neighborhood of two and a quarter million dollars.

I seem to recall that the last paragraph of our review of this year's "Cyrano" made the observation that a great many theatergoers, who take the drama seriously, would hope Mr. Hampden might be induced to reconsider his seeming determination to make his abandonment of the play permanent. They got their hope, if the old grapevine route retains anything of its accustomed accuracy.

Screen notables will be popping in on us these next few days. Charles Garrett, of Gaumont British Pictures, wires from New York that Peter Lorre, star of the forthcoming GB picturization of W. Somerset Maugham's "Secret Agent," and last seen here, I believe, with Edward Arnold in Dostoievski's "Crime and Punishment," will arrive in Washington by train at 2:30 this afternoon to appear with Rudy Vallee tonight in his broadcast over Station WRC. On Saturday, Phil Regan, the singing star of the cinema, whose current hit is "Irish Eyes," with Walter C. Kelly, "The Virginia Judge," will arrive in the Capital to be on hand to serve as a second in Freddie Miller's corner when he boxes Petey Sarron in defense of his world's featherweight title at Griffith Stadium next Monday night in the first outdoor boxing show of the season. This evening of fisticuffing, by the way, is for the benefit of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club and will furnish one of the best bills ever assembled, in addition to drawing one of the biggest and most distinguished crowds ever attracted by a similar event in the National Capital. Phil will be in fast company Monday night. So will Petey Sarron and so will Freddie Miller—not mentioning you and me.

A little further and more explicit information concerning that screen program of documentary films to be presented in the ballroom of the Mayflower Sunday night at 9, under the auspices of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, makes known that six different pictures from five different countries will comprise the bill.

The two British pictures to be shown are "Colorbox," made by the General Postoffice film unit, under the direction of Len Leye, and "The Face of Britain," directed by Paul Rotha, authority on the documentary film. A French film produced by the French State Railways, "French Cathedrals," will show interesting sidelights on some of France's most interesting culture.

Excerpts also will be shown from "Harvest Festival," a Russian picture, produced by Ukrainfilm of Kiev, and from "Triumph of the Will," described as a great German epic, directed by Lena Reifenstahl. The final item of the Sabbath evening program will be "The Plow That Broke the Plains," a Resettlement Administration production, selected by the Film Library as the best documentary work done by the American Government to date.

This novel evening of informative gelatin entertainment was being eagerly anticipated by this column, when the National Theater management and Alex Yokel got their heads together and decided to open the impending engagement of "Three Men on a Horse" Sunday night, instead of Monday. That, as has been observed here before, seems to be the way life is!

Those who pay attention to such things, will note with high surprise, no doubt, that Joan Bennett will be practically epidemic on the local screen next week. The youngest of the Dick Bennett clan will be prevalent opposite Cary Grant in "Big Brown Eyes," on the screen at Loew's Fox; opposite Fred MacMurray, in "Thirteen Hours by Air," at the Earle, and with Katharine Hepburn and her gifted associates in the revival of "Little Women," scheduled for the Little Theater. I can think of no one who could make this multiple-presence easier to take than the youngest of the Bennetts. And if Husband ene Markey doesn't like that, the back of my hand to him, too. (If you happen to see this, ene, I'm only kidding.)

* * * *

Although there have been nebulous rumors floating about to the effect that "Three Men on a Horse," the riotous comedy opening in the National Theater on Sunday night, would make its return engagement to the playhouse that celebrated its first performance on any stage, something over a year ago, one of a fortnight's duration, it now appears that the Alex Yokel production is latterly scheduled for a single week, after all.

I am moved to this reasonably safe conclusion by a late flash proclaiming the return of Henry Hull in "Tobacco Road" to the National for at least one week, beginning a week from next Sunday night, May 17. The powers that be, in New York, however, can make a very elegant, A-No. 1 prevaricator—slang for liar—out of me any minute now by cancelling the bookings that seem to be definitely set as this is written.

The acting version of Jack Kirkland's dramatization of Erskine Caldwell's novel of "Tobacco Road," of course, will be the same one presented earlier in the season for the eight-day engagement of 11 performances. The play was scrutinized by delegations of censors on two nights at that time and passed without deletion or change.

As between the New York Drama Critics Circle's selection of Maxwell Anderson's play of "Winterset," as the best drama of the 1935-36 season, and the Pulitzer Prize committee's of Robert Emmett Sherwood's "Idiot's Delight," my vote still is cast on the side of the Critics Circle—not that it matters.

The comparative merits of these two plays, as they impressed themselves upon this department, were pretty definitely, and as thoroughly as might be, discussed upon the occasions of their respective visits to the stage of the National Theater. Neither was perfect, but, of the two, "Winterset" seemed to me to make the nearer approach to a perfected welding of the essential elements of sound dramatic structure and exposition of a concise and continuous central theme.

Aside from any consideration of mere structural form, our learned friend, Mr. Clayton Hamilton, seems to have raised a salient point when he upbraids the Pulitzer committee for having ignored its own emphatic stipulation that the prize play must be one treating of an American subject of general interest. "Idiot's Delight" fails to meet this requirement, save in the vaguest and most remote sense.

Let's-Not-Get-Personal Note.

Will the gentleman in the rear of the hall, who just remarked that picking flaws in "Idiot's Delight" is merely another form of idiot's delight, please stand up?

Broadway

Baltimore, Md., May 6.—It was in this town that Clark Gable, for the only time in his career, posed as Gene Goldberg . . .

HEPBURN.

Gable, arriving here, was besieged by Maryland women, and finally it reached such a point that they even invaded the floor of the Lord Baltimore Hotel . . . So Gable sneaked out of the hotel, switched to another and checked in under the name of Gene Goldberg. . . . For the balance of the week, he came and went unmolested, which perhaps answers the age-old query of "What's in a name?"

Ben Schullberg will make an eight-flicker deal with RKO, one Astaire picture, one Katie Hepburn, and one Ginger Rogers picture being included in the deal. . . . Practically the same type of contract as Pandro Berman has on the Radio lot . . .

This charming-old city is distinguished by its maze of alleys . . . Streets ramble in behind warehouses and dissolves into alleys . . . At the Lord Baltimore, incidentally, Ben Alley is the headliner.

Most unusual night club I've ever seen, and your reporter has seen a lot of 'em, is the Oasis here . . . It is located in a cellar, and for the past nine years, it has proved a gold mine for the inventive owner, Max Cohen, an emigre from New York . . . The feature is a line of chorus girls, whose ages range from 23 to 47 . . . They sit around at tables, in evening gowns, but when the Master of Ceremonies starts the show, they stand up at the tables, peel off their evening gowns and are revealed in their chorus costumes . . . When they finish a number, they wriggle back into their evening gowns and sit at the tables again . . . He pays these girls $12 a week, and they round out that wage with a bonus on drinks their companions order . . . John Barrymore, on one of his Baltimore visits, spent hours at the Oasis, and wound up on the floor reciting Hamlet's soliloquy . . . The patrons were pretty mad at him for introducing a melancholy note, and Barrymore had to square himself with the irate customers by buying drinks for the house.

Fred Sanborn, vaudeville veteran, has added Midget Billy Curtis to his act . . . Curtis, who is 4 feet nothing tall, has fallen desperately in love with Lorraine Stanley, who is 5 feet 9 inches . . . Last night, during the storm, little Billy escorted Miss Stanley home and gallantly tried to get a cab . . . The little fellow stood manfully in the rain, but cab drivers passed him by, thinking he was some schoolboy . . . Finally, he sneaked into a cab that parked at the curb . . . "Get out of there," stormed the cabbie . . . "This costs money" . . . The little fellow yelled: "I got money. I'm an actor" . . . The cabbie was incredulous: "If you got money, get yoursalf a kiddie car."

Notes: Elliott Daniels, in the Vallee band, spends all of his dough long-distance phoning Lorraine Santschi, Boston beauty . . . Bill Plankinton's bachelor dinner tonight may prevent him from attending his wedding tomorrow . . . It's going to be that kind of a party . . . While Anatole Friedland was in Baltimore over the week-end, a blaze wiped out the baby's room in his New York apartment . . . Nobody was home . . . You'll be surprised at the name of the co-respondent in the C. Gardiner

Sullivan Court Squabble.

Eugenie Woods, in the WPA cast of "Chalk Dust," is the talented wife of Doc Woods, the old trainer of the N. Y. Yankees . . . Newspapermen through the country believe that the only logical successor to the late Percy Hammond will be Clevelander Bill McDermott . . . Katharine Cornell opens most of her plays in that city just to get his astute criticism . . . Walter Ramsey resigned as Photoplay's Eastern boss, and is now back in Hollywood . . . Alan McNeil is the latest to win dates with gorgeous Loretta Young . . . John Blystone, after 16 years with Fox, is about to sign with Metro.

The little people of the profession are fine little characters. . . . But quick to resent any real or fancied grievance . . . Olive Brasnau, the tiny doll-like performer in Buster Shaver's act, got even once with Shaver . . . He had done something that the mite resented . . . Just as the curtain was about to go up, Shaver's shrill screams could be heard backstage . . . "Where is it?" "Where is it? . . . The three-foot Brasnau girl had hidden his toupe.

Curtis tells me that the real difficulty of the little people is to buy cigarettes or beer . . . In Washington, when he was playing with Billy Gaxton and Victor Moore, the tiny Curtis had to send stagehands out for his ciggies and beer . . . Shopkeepers refused to serve him, one of them threatening to call a truant officer when he demanded his favorite brand.

Medical Center For Navy Beaten

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday struck from the House naval supply bill an item of $295,000 to start construction of a naval medical center in Washington, but authorized the building of the model basin for aircraft and ships in the vicinity of Washington.

While no specific amount was appropriated for the model basin—the ultimate cost of which is $3,500,000—the committee made provision for use of part of the $5,000,000 appropriated for docks and yards.

The House failed to make provision for the model basin because the authorization act had not passed Congress when the committee considered the bill. The location of the basin is expected to be near Cabin John, Md.

No Wonder the Marines Are Proud!

When Columbia Pictures, Inc., releases its new production of "Pride of the Marines," the foremost feminine role will be played by Florence Rice, the beautiful young actress whose likeness appears above in the midst of all that aurora borealis effect. The principal masculine characters will be impersonated, in their robust and rowdy way, by Charles Bickford and Billy Barrud. Miss Rice, in case you had forgotten, is the daughter of Grantland Rice, famous sports commentator and producer of those interesting "Sportlights" you see on the screen.

Hollywood, May 6.

Again, it is evident that the fans tell of more boners in the better flickers—for it is these pictures that are doing the business—these pictures they go to see. The favorite appears to be 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town,' and writing about it James Mullaghy says: "Jean Arthur attracts the attention of Gary Cooper by pretending to faint from exhaustion on the rain-swept sidewalk. She falls into a large puddle of water. Helped to her feet, wringing wet, she is seen a few minutes later, sitting in a dining room wearing the same clothing and looking as though she had just stepped out of a bandbox." Mr. Mullaghy, it seems, wants his heroine all wet when she should be all wet.

JEAN ARTHUR.

Concerning "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," Frank McKay insists that when Cooper is interviewing farmers, one white-haired, intelligent looking man in the crowd stands out. Later, in the trial sequence, this man is now magically transformed into a policeman and gives Mr. Cooper a chair.

In the flicker "Small Town Girl," says Claudia Markham, Robert Taylor is seen looking at the February calendar. And, most amazing, the month of February has 31 days.

Leave it to the movies to change even the calendar. The movies make everything colossal, even the small month of February.

* * * *

"Most of the action in the flicker 'Trail of the Lonesome Pine' takes place outdoors, yet one hears only the sound of voices or such other sounds are dubbed in as necessary," writes Mary Katz. "The great outdoors, especially in mountainous regions, is full of noises, yet no rustling of trees or singing of birds was heard." This may be odd, Miss Katz, but odder is the fact that Director Henry Hathaway actually filmed this picture outdoors at Big Bear. He couldn't control all the noises, and if there had been birds singing, his microphone would have picked up the sounds.

Helen Broderick in the flicker, "Murder on the Bridle Path," is standing in front of a building, when a newsboy comes by shouting: "Extra." Miss Broderick takes a paper from the boy, but, says Arthur Murray, the boy doesn't wait to get paid for it.

Gary Cooper in "Desire" is told that he may travel in Spain in a Bronson-eight car, providing the car flaunts the name Bronson, for advertising purposes. In fact, the words: "I am delighted to drive a Bronson 8," are painted on the cover of the spare tire in the rear. However, writes Augustine Ponte, across the front of the radiator is seen the name Pontiac.

The director might have concealed this trade-mark, or perhaps it isn't permissible to hide the trade-mark of an automobile and have it pose as another brand of auto, even in a movie.

John Boles in the flicker, "A Message to Garcia," is being tortured in an effort to make him tell where the message is. Then a bucket of water is thrown at Boles to revive him so that the torture can continue. But, in a scene a few minutes later, writes R. Long, Boles shirt is quite dry and fluffy.

The fact is that this sequence was filmed on different days, and it wasn't considered necessary by the director and John Boles to wear a wet shirt. However, regardless of what you say about the flicker, it was a picture with a message.

Comedy Smash Once More at The National

'Three Men on a Horse' to Competes With Next Week's Films.

The seat sale for "Three Men on a Horse," the hilariously funny comedy by John Cecil Holm and George Abbott, will begin today at the National Theater. The return engagement of this popular hit, which had its premiere at the National many months ago, will be inaugurated on next Sunday night, May 10. The cast includes Jack Sheehan, Ruth Lee, Matt Briggs, Harry Davenport, Owen Martin, Mary Loane, Eleanor Audley, Grandon Rhodes, William Foran and numerous others who add to the zest of this record-making farce. The story concerns three players of the ponies and a meek little man who writes greeting verses for postcards. Matinees are scheduled for Wednesday and Saturday, as usual.

"These Three," Samuel Goldwyn's picturization for United Artists of Lillian Hellman's stage play of "The Children's Hour," will be the chief film feature at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The title roles are played by Merle Oberon, Joel McCrea and Miriam Hopkins. The story is of the havoc that can be wrought by the malicious tongue of a small girl who fabricates fantastic stories about her elders. Supporting the pivotal players are Catherine Doucet, Alma Kruger, Walter Brennan, Benita Granville and Marcia Mae Jones. "Just Plain Folks," a comedy; Mickey Mouse in "Grand Opera" and newsreel will complete the bill.

Fred MacMurray and Joan Bennett are the co-stars of "Thirteen Hours by Air," the thrilling screen coming to the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. In their support will be ZaSu Pitts, John Howard, Bennie Bartlett, Grace Bradley, Alan Baxter, Brian Donlevy, Ruth Donnelly and Fred Keating. On the stage, the entertainment will be provided by Ted Fio-Rito and his famous Cocoanut Grove Orchestra, introducing Muzzy Marcellino, the Three Debutantes, Stanley Hickman and "Candy," the double-voiced comedian, last seen here with Gene Austin on the same stage. The bill will be completed by newsreel and orchestral interludes under the baton of Freddie Clark.

Park avenue's smoothest con man got away with murder, until he met a fascinating young former manicurist, turned newspaper gal to help her policeman boy friend run down a pack of hoodlums. Such is the nature of the story to be seen in "Big Brown Eyes," a speedy romantic comedy coming to the screen at Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow for a week's stay. Joan Bennett and Cary Grant are the principal players in this gay film. The stage portion of the bill will be headlined by Mitchell and Durant, recently seen on the screen with Al Jolson in "The Singing Kid." Others on the living program will be Bryant, Raines and Young, Capt. Willie Mauss and Fred East, William Raymond and Edwin Steffe.

Following the current long-run engagement of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," with Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur, the chief screen feature at the Metropolitan will be "Times Square Playboy," a film play founded on George M. Cohen's play of "The Hometowners." Warren William and June Travis are the featured players.

Shirley Temple will be the pictured star for the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Columbia in "Captain January," the latest vehicle for her singing, dancing and emotionalism. In this story of the New England coast, Shirley is supported by Guy Kibbee, Slim Summerville, June Lang, Buddy Ebsen and Jane Darnell.

"Ecstasy," one of the most widely discussed films of the year, is scoring so decisive a triumph at the Belasco Theater that a third consecutive, capacity week is expected to begin on Saturday. In this symbolic Czechoslovakian production, the stellar role is taken by Hedy Kiesler, a continental beauty.

For the remainder of the current week at the Little Theater, Elisabeth Bergner will continue the pictured star in "Escape Me Never," the screen version of her stage success. Beginning Sunday, the major attraction will be a revival of of "Little Women," Katharine Hepburn's supreme triumph on the screen.

With the touch of warmer weather that has gladdened the Capital, patrons of Glen Echo Park have taken to the new 'drive-'em-yourself" motorboats, the amusement center's newest and most novel feature, with a vengeance. This is the season's addition to a list of attractions numbering more than 50. Dave McWilliams' 12-piece orchestra continues a potent lure to the Spanish Garden Ballroom, where dancing is enjoyed nightly.

The final week of the season at Col. James J. Lake's Gayety Theater will begin with the customary Sunday matinee performance next Sunday afternoon. The attraction for farewell week—until next Labor Day—will be another Independent Burlesque Association production, featuring Sam Raynor and Murray Briscoe, a comedy team not seen here for three years, Lillian Dixon will head the feminie contingent.

Rimski-Korsakoff's fairy-tale opera, "Snegurochka" ("Snow Maiden") will be presented by Mme. Marie Zalipska tonight at 8:30 in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest. The opera will be sung in English, using the excellent translation by Edward Agate. The title role will be sung by Eilse Hastings. Theodore Bekefi is in charge of incidental dances.

Mme. Louise Coutinho will present a group of artists and a few students in a varied program in the patio of the Carlton Hotel tomorrow night at 8:30 for the benefit of the National Symphony Orchestra sustaining fund. Vocal, instrumental and dance groups will be featured.

Bidding as a Guide to Play.

The fact that contract players, as a body, are infinitely more adept at the play of the cards than were auction players of the old school, is due in a large measure to the more precise inferences to be garnered from contract bidding. The orderly exchange of information between partners, so necessary to reaching the correct contract, is, at the same time, an invaluable chart from which the adversaries should plot their course.

Just as a bid locates certain cards almost infallibly, so a "pass" carries equally definite implications to the player who is alert enough to interpret intelligently. In today's hand the declarer's failure to remember the bidding cost him at least 600, possibly 1,200, points.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 heart
Pass	Pass	Pass

West's bidding was on a par with his subsequent play. Having made the error of opening with an unbiddable suit (instead of his correct opening bid of one diamond), he then closed his eyes to the purely pre-emptive nature of his partner's jump raise to game, and redoubled. South's double was, of course, speculative. He recognized East's bid as a show of weakness and figured that his partner, North, would be able to take one trick, in addition to his own almost certain three tricks. South's failure to open the bidding with three honor tricks was due to his extreme weakness in playing tricks.

North opened the eight of spades, East covered, and South won with the king. To make sure that dummy's singleton club could not be discarded, South cashed the ace, after which he played the ace and another spade. On the third round declarer ruffed with the eight of hearts. North overruffed with the nine and led a diamond. Dummy's jack held and now a small trump was led from dummy. When South played the six, declarer completed his miserable performance by going up with the king! North took the ace and later South's queen accounted for the third setting trick, a 1,600-point penalty.

Quite obviously, declarer played the entire hand on the assumption that South's penalty double marked every key card, including high trumps, in his hand. That this was completely fallacious should have been apparent for one single reason: South had passed originally! After he showed the ace-king of spades and the ace of clubs, declarer could be certain that he did not also have the ace of hearts. Such a pass would be unthinkable. Declarer's

Skeleton Found In West Linked To Gold Plots

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, May 6.—The sun-whitened skeleton of a man, believed to have fallen victim to persons operating a fake Mexican gold smuggling plot, was brought here tonight in an effort at identification. Old dental work in the skull was expected to reveal the victim as a wealthy Los Angeles resident, one of several persons solicited in the spurious smuggling plot.

The skeleton was found in a shallow grave, 29 miles from Wellton, Ariz. The skull was split. Identification was undertaken by Sheriff T. A. Newman, of Yuma, Ariz., and R. L. Odom, his deputy.

Mexican "gold smuggling"—a fraudulent legend of illicit operations, obviously a fake, since there is no State or Federal law against transporting gold over the border—is known to have been bait for numerous wealthy Southern Californians over the last dozen years.

Hidden Gold Promise.

Newman said he believed the man whose skeleton was found was lured to the desert on the promise of "hidden gold" cached in a remote spot by "gold smugglers," and killed.

One phase of the investigation led to the strange bomb suicide of Dr. William D. Moriarty, professor of economics at the University of Southern California, who blew up his car last month, killing himself and his wife.

Newman disclosed that Harley McCoy, who was with Moriarty the night of the suicide, and who was his partner in several gold mining ventures, had been called in for questioning on the desert killing.

A man giving the name of Hatley McCoy registered at a Wellton auto camp on January 28, together with a John Laidon. McCoy told Mrs. Madeline Spain, proprietor of the camp, he was interested in Mexican mines.

Telegram Cited.

Newman also sent a telegram from Wellton on January 28 to Eleanor Thonis, companion of McCoy the night of the Moriarty suicide, which said: "Mac will arrive home tonight. Leave Wellton this a. m."

Newton said he believed McCoy might have some information as to the identity of the mysterious victim. Police also revealed that Dr. Moriarty was reported to have been interested in a plan to bring bullion from a "mountain of gold" in Sonora, Mex., into the United States.

He was reportedly associated with a Yaqui Indian, John K. Larrimore, in this bizarre plan. Newman said he also should question Dr. Moriarty's son, John Moriarty, of Chicago, who insisted at the time of the economist's death that his father had been murdered.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

What Am I to Do? Asks Man Who Needs Medical Treatment Which His Purse Will Not Afford.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: For the past five years I have been blessed with an ever-present acne infection. My parents, despite many financial burdens, allowed me an occasional treatment, administered by a charitably inclined physician for the unheard-of sum of one dollar per treatment. These were highly beneficial.

Now I find myself in Washington employed by the Government in an extremely subordinate position, able to pay a moderate sum for further treatment but so far unsuccessful in obtaining the services of any competent skin specialist. Five dollars is the standard charge for this treatment. The skin clinics have no X-ray apparatus, the only cure for acne.

What, then, am I to do? Wait until some kind and benevolent person endows a clinic and specifies that X-ray treatment be included? Wait several years for a salary increase that will permit $5 weekly treatments? Or continue to believe that justice always triumphs, that there is a Santa Claus and that somewhere exists a skin specialist (competent, of course) who will condescend to administer treatment for the modest sum of two dollars? Perhaps it is within your power to provide the answer to this drawn-out question. I sincerely hope so. Very truly yours, J. S.

• • • •

Apply to Medical Dental Service Bureau.

DEAR J. S.: Your problem has been called to the attention of Miss Josephine J. Schindel, assistant medical social worker with the Medical Dental Service Bureau, in the health Security Building, Eighth and Eye streets northwest. She has your name, address and your case history as told to me. "Twenty One" Applauded.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter published in your column of April 18, written by a young girl who signed herself "Twenty One" is a document I am unable to forget. After thinking it over at length, I have finally decided to tell her through your column that there is at least one man whose tastes and ideals are apparently very similar to her own; a man who has waited 13 years longer than she has for the suitable life companion to appear.

I am now nearly 34 and in the last half of my life I have been in love (or thought at the time I was; which amounts to the same thing) three times, and have been engaged twice for about three years each time. In both cases, however, the girl and I eventually realized we were not suited temperamentally, and were very thankful to have this out before marriage instead of afterward when it would likely have caused much more heartache.

• • • •

My theories on marriage and a home are just as idealistic as are those of "Twenty One" and I intend to hold to these ideals whether or not I ever marry. Although I enjoy life to the fullest extent possible to a single man, I have a strong desire for a wife and children, but I propose to remain single until I meet a girl whose ideals equal my own For, like "Twenty-one" my feeling about marriage is that it "is something sacred and in the last analysis the purpose and fulfillment of life . . . I would not, however, marry unless a physical examination showed an individual mutual fitness for marriage. Neither would I consider marrying a girl who was not physically attractive to me.

• • • •

I agree also that "Twenty One" has the right idea in believing that "a home is more sacred than a church" . . . I think, too, that religious compatability in marriage is most important, because absolutely necessary to oneness of spirit which in turn is essential to harmonious living. I am a member of a little known but eminently satisfying Protestant denomination, the like of which I sought for years while making the extreme adjustments necessary in emerging from radical fundamentalism to a practicable, reasonable and scientific faith based on the Bible as the word of God.

• • • •

I have many friends, especially among young married couples and I keep company with several young women of very fine type, with whom I enjoy various games and sports. I like tennis, boating, bicycling, motoring and hiking. I have a small car. I enjoy table tennis, intellectual games, reading (especially aloud), good stage and screen plays, choral singing and amateur dramatics. I know the first principles of bridge but prefer other diversions. Art, literature and music have a great fascination for me. I am not a prig and I think I have a good sense of humor.

• • • •

This is the first letter I have ever written to an experience column but I have enjoyed your recent letters very much and have been so satisfied with your replies that I want you to know that one type of man at least approaching "Twenty One's" ideal does exist. If she reads my letter and is interested, I should like to meet her.

Very truly yours, IDEALIST.

Matchmaking Eschewed.

DEAR IDEALIST: Well, here is your letter in print. As I have said before in this column, I have no wish to act as matchmaker, but I suppose no harm is done in letting "Twenty One" know, via this medium, that at least one young man exists who fully indorses her thories about life, love and marriage. As for arranging an introduction between you, I would prefer, under these circumstances to introduce you to "Twenty One's" parents rather than to "Twenty One" herself supposing, your bid for friendship arouses any spark of interest from that source.

Dark Colors Sponsored by Hollywood

These two frocks, "styled in Hollywood," show the trend toward dark sheers as a smart summer fashion. For afternoon or restaurant wear, the street-length model, on the right, of black with dusty pink tunic coat of organdy eyelet embroidery, is a striking and practical selection. The black marquisette with ivory lace inserts is an ideal "double duty" frock. With the short, fitted jacket, it is smart for dinner; without the coat, correct for any formal occasion. For information as to where these dresses can be purchased, call The Post Fashion Editor, NAtional 4200, Branch 323.

Peasant Dress and Dinner Ensemble Created by Bebe Daniels.

HOLLYWOOD, as one of the leading style centers of the world, is not satisfied with its huge picture audience viewing the latest and exotic in dress from the screen, so the women of America are being given a prevue of all that's smart in fashion on living models in a traveling style show. In Jelleff's Little Theater yesterday afternoon, clothes for all occasions were worn by the manniquins—featured players in Hollywood productions. The showing is sponsored by the Associated Manufacturers of Los Angeles, directed by Enid Parrish, their stylist.

The outstanding costume was a "peasant dress" dress designed by Bebe Daniels—white crepe with touches of bright print at the throat and belt, and long coat of the printed material with long shawl collar of the white. A dinner ensemble, also designed by Miss Daniels—a floor-length frock in white crepe with men's tie silk tailored coat in gay stripes on a navy ground—created a lot of favorable comment.

Culottes for Sport, Street.

Culottes are definitely a part of Hollywood's attire—there, they are worn not only for sports but also on the street; in this event they are made of silk, with scarf and belt added. For active sports, shorts and shirts continue, the newest of pique, combining plain and printed patterns. For spectator wear, a new light-weight woolen and silk fabric is the medium for two and three piece frocks and tailored suits.

Chiffon in Dark and Bright Colors Favored in Many Patterns.

Chiffon in dark and bright colors—solid colors or geometrical prints—are Hollywood's version. Many of these make use of the taffeta petticoat idea. For evening and dinner, tunic dresses are the most popular—of chiffon or crepe. The tunics being long and full over well-fitted slips. Dark colors, particularly navy and black, are suggested as the correct choice for the fastidious woman. Heavenly blue starched marquistte was a delightful deviation in this classification, made with long, tight sleeves with huge puffs at the shoulder.

Dotted Wools for Swimming.

To swim, according to the Hollywood prescription, you may don either a dark dotted wollen suit or one of white lastex. And, your feet will be dressed for any and all occasions in 'Hollywood sandals'—high heels for dress, flats for sports.

Studio modes abound in the millinery phase of fashion—the leading material, starched pique in white accents of dark or high fashion colors. Modified Homburgs, coolie sailors, Dutch bonnets in starched pique to accompany street and sports clothes; felt swagger hats in white and pastel tints, in large or small versions for chic variation.

Modern Schools Aim to Develop Child's Brawn as Well as Brain

International Education Leader Here, Describes New World Trend.

THE UNDERWEIGHT, be-spectacled child who pored over his studies by day and burned the midnight oil preparing his lessons for the next day, formerly was considered an exemplary individual, to whom both parents and teachers pointed with pride.

Now, however, the boy who spends all his time studying is a forlorn figure beside the better balanced pupil, who may not make as high grades, but who excels in sports and knows how to mingle happily with his associates; and who has learned the rules of health along with Latin verbs and dates of wars.

This trend in modern education is particularly noticeable in Germany, where there is now a marked reaction against overly-intellectual training and a desire to correlate physical and mental development in pupils, according to Mlle. Marie Butts, of Geneva, Switzerland, general secretary of the International Bureau of Education.

The New York Kindergarten Association, through its Susan Blow Memrdial Fund, brought Mlle. Butts to this country to attend, as guest-lecturer, the recent meeting of the Association for Childhood Education in New York.

Later she came to Washington to visit the national headquarters of the Association for Childhood Education.

In an interview yesterday she told something of the history and purpose of the International Bureau of Education and discussed recent changes in education in the 13 countries connected with it.

Since the bureau was founded 10 years ago to serve as a clearing house for all information on education below university level, and to promote exchange of discussion between governments on this subject, Mlle. Butts has had an opportunity to observe the picture of youth training as it has changed in countries throughout the world during the last decade.

Turkish Girls Advance.

Correlation is the keynote of education today, she pointed out. "In Germany, for example, there is a reciprocal relationship between different levels of education (between kindergarten and elementary school, for example), as well as between brain and brawn development." She explained, also, that another type of correlation is being worked out for boys and girls after they leave elementary school in the "land year" project which provides that all pupils shall spend at least eight months working on farms in order to gain a knowledge of the life and problems of peasants who earn their daily bread from the soil.

So far as the elementary schools of Germany are concerned, girls have an equal chance with boys in obtaining an education, she said. "In the upper levels of school work, their opportunities are far less," she added, "since the women can compose only 10 per cent of the total enrollment in the universities."

In Turkey, on the other hand, women today have a better opportunity for training in all levels of school work than they have ever had, she said. Co-education, an undreamed of thing back in the days when all women were veiled from the public eye, is now in full swing in Turkish institutions, where girls have an equal chance with boys to study the same subjects in the same classes.

"Probably one of the most outstanding trends in modern education has been brought about by the world depression," Mlle. Butts continued. "This is the fight against illiterarcy of adults in virtually every country. In Russia, China and Mexico, much has already been accomplished in this line, since fathers and mothers—denied the benefits of training in earlier years—are being taught at last how to read and write. In other countries, where there are fewer under-priviledged adults, fathers and mothers are being given opportunities for higher types of training."

Today's HEALTH TALK

Rheumatism—An Efficiency Destroyer.

As youngsters we had pretty definite ideas about rheumatism. We all knew "Uncle John," a stoop-shouldered, bewhiskered old codger who "stopped by" two or three times each week and kept the household supplied with fresh vegetables in summer and eggs in winter. He was always forever complaining of his "rheuma-tics," and he could forecast the coming of storms rather accurately, depending upon the ache in his "jints." So rheumatism to us typified a kindly old gentleman with the powers of a weather prophet.

Of course, we now recognize that "Uncle John" had a rather severe grade of chronic arthritis—quite a different thing from acute rheumatic fever which we later learned about.

Weather, Too.

The spring season is upon us with its days and nights of rapid changes in temperature which are conducive to chilling the body if care is not exercised. Just why the disease will select one person and not another can be explained only on the basis of decreased resistance.

We all know that any factor that increases fatigue, such as loss of sleep or even a cold, may drop body reserve to the point at which rheumatism will develop. Some authorities believe, however, that certain individuals possess an inherent tendency to the disease; that constitutionally they are predisposed to it. Most English writers attribute its occurrence to bad hygiene, poor housing, insufficient food or clothing, etc.

But few attacks arise without some obvious, immediate cause. For example, many patients will complain of an acute sore throat, tonsilitis, or a nasal or respiratory infection. After a few days there may appear symptoms of chilling and within 24 hours the acute phase is launched.

The temperature rises to 102 to 104 degrees Fahrenheit, the pulse becomes rapid, perspiration is excessive, and two or more joints will be swollen, hot, red, and painful. If the disease does not subside quickly other joints will become involved; in fact, no area of the body where bones join together is exempt.

Under the influence of salicylates recovery occurs in practically all cases, although the time required may be weeks or months.

Now comes the tragic chapter in the story. The patient may overcome acute rheumatism only to be advised that the heart has been seriously damaged. This is particularly true when the disease affects children. The program from then on must be one in which the heart will receive constant supervision and the activities of the patient be so guided that he may have the best possible chance for a normal life expectancy. Under skilled care a rheumatic heart may function well throughout life. If neglected, however, it will become inefficient in the third, fourth, or fifth decade.

Hard to Control.

The pity of it is that heart damage may be prevented in a high percentage of cases if the patient can be managed under proper conditions. Rest in bed during the acute stage is, of course, demanded by the very nature of the disease—the patient can't walk. But to safeguard vital structures this rest period must be prolonged much beyond the period of normal temperature. This is a difficult and arduous prescription, but if every case would maintain the status of a bed patient for a month after the acute manifestations have disappeared, and for an additional six months become a home lounge loafer, the incidence of heart disease would be cut in half.

Reading Urged For Children During Holiday

Collection of Books Called Part of Vocation Equipment.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THE LONG summer vacation is a good time for the children to do some outside reading, and most schools give a list of suggested books for the child to choose from. But a list is useless if the books are not available, and many summer holidays are spent far from libraries.

Part of the equipment for vacations might well be a collection of books which "should be read." Most of the classics and many of the moderns come in very inexpensive editions, which are quite good enough to be included in the average library.

If the books were given to the children there would be an added incentive for reading them. There is something about owning a book which encourages a child to find out what is inside.

There are long, rainy days, sometimes weeks, in summer, when there is nothing to do. If books are at hand the child probably will read them. In fact, he probably would take to the dictionary if nothing else were available. For sheer boredom nothing equals the effect of a northeast storm, when the world outside is sodden and unattractive, and the family is at outs, and indoor sports have palled.

During the winter the children have comparatively little time for free reading, and free reading is as important in forming and developing a child's spiritual and intellectual growth as free play is on the physical side. The two go hand in hand, though this fact is not always recognized.

Let the summer library be good but varied, and encourage the child to browse widely in it. A vacation spent entirely on relaxing and training the body, with no thought of the mind, is a very one-sided affair, and as unhealthy as would be the months of school with no exercise and open air.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE.

"PASCOE had opened the door of the Bradley cabin, laughing in gay good nature.

"Well, I beat you to it by about three hours," he said.

Clara Bradley took the last half dozen steps from the door to the one easy chair the little cabin afforded and sank into it exhaustedly.

Joseph Bradley searched his pockets for a cigaret, found and lighted it, dropped back in the nearest chair. "It is a wonder you weren't caught up with, Pascoe. Lay you 10 to 1 you were followed."

Pascoe liked the idea. "Take you. I boarded a train at the LaSalle depot. I came right through to Denver. Cached a few things where I knew they'd be safe and caught a bus. I dropped off the bus on the highway at the foot of the pass and beat it over here."

"How far?"

"I know a short cut. A mile and a half."

"But the devil's own path to follow; wonder you hadn't got lost."

"I could follow it. I got away. Nobody followed me. But how did you manage?"

Dangerous Move.

"Jim's coupe. We drove through."

"You know."

"At the gulley?"

"Yes."

Pascoe pondered that. "Bad business, Joe."

"How come bad business?"

"Someone will find it. It is a suspicious car left that way."

Joseph Bradley had worried about that himself. "Well, what could I do with it? I couldn't very well eat it, could I, or roll it down a cliff or even burn it? I had to take a chance."

"I hope it's O. K.." Pascoe said. There was no doubt that he held Joseph Bradley in disdain.

Clara Bradley kicked her shoes off. "Hell, my feet are tired. Bet they're blistered."

"Well, they'll have plenty of time to heal," Pascoe grinned. "By the way, who's that kid you brought with you? That Rogers who was at the house?"

"Where is he?" Clara Bradley was on her aching feet, hurrying toward the door.

"Don't worry," Joseph Bradley said, stepping to the door ahead of her. "He's right where I thought he would be. Sound asleep under the tree there where he sat down. I'll tie his ankles right where he lies, but I don't believe there's any need to. Where is the rope, Clara?"

Clara sat down with sudden realization. "Oh, Joe," she wailed, "I left it in the car."

There was no doubting Joseph Bradley's blazing anger. "You would. How you ever had sense enough to even live before you married me passes my understanding?"

"Shut up, you two," Pascoe commanded in sudden rage. "I'm going to get mad myself. I'll be darned if I intend to sit here and listen to you two yell at each other all day long. There's a pair of bracelets and anklets there with my tools and things I had for the McRae job. I thought they were safer here than any place else so I brought them along."

"Right there by your chair."

"Let's don't drive on for a while," Jerry mumbled a minute later as Bradley bent over him. "Honestly, Mr. Bradley, I'm just too tired to drive another mile. I'm afraid we'll have an accident."

"Shut up." Bradley told him not unkindly. "we aren't driving. We're here. Understand? Here. Go to sleep."

Good Humor.

Jerry paid no attention to the fact that his feet and arms were pinioned fast. He was starved for sleep and sleep was within his grasp.

Inside the cabin Clara Bradley and Pascoe were rather good humoredly talking it over.

"I'll confess this is the jumping off place," Clara declared, "but at that I guess it's better than being in jail. We certainly had a hard enough getaway."

"I've wondered what happened. We haven't heard a word. I wanted Joe to go in through Omaha and try to get papers, but he wouldn't do it."

"I got a Denver paper," Pascoe said.

"That's a perfectly horrid picture of me," Clara complained.

Pascoe laughed long and heartily. "Isn't that just the eternal femme of it, Joe? Here's Clara wanting to be pictured as beautiful and referred to by the newspapers as the pretty girl sweetheart of the crook hero."

"Shut up," Clara wasn't pleased with Pascoe's mirth. "Shut right up. What have you got in this hole to eat?"

He followed Clara into the little pantry leanto. "And while you're counting the cans, take time to thank your lucky stars that we've got the stuff here."

"How can I thank my lucky stars when I'm here at all?" Clara grumbled.

But even Clara could not deny that it felt good, even after the very meager and unattractive meal, to crawl into the hard bunk. She paid scant attention to the fact that it was hard and that the pillow was thin and unpleasant and the blankets scratchy despite the comforting warmness in the chill of the mountain night.

Nor did any of them, inside the cabin, pay much attention to their immediate surroundings for the next 8 or 10 hours.

Outside, about midnight the stars were covered by angry, quickly drifting clouds, a quick wind sprang up and brought pelting rain.

Jerry opened his eyes, wakened by the cold and the rain. At first he thought he must be dreaming. Dreaming over the days and nights of that seemingly never-to-be-forgotten ride. But imagining a dream could not confuse his thinking for long. It wasn't any dream that he shivered with the cold. It wasn't any dream that the rain pelted into his face.

And it wasn't any dream that his hands and legs were cramped and that they were tightly pinioned. But the sleep had refreshed him so that he could quickly size up his position.

Hunching ahead in a half sitting, half sprawling fashion, he managed to get quite close to the cabin. Escape, of course, was impossible. But, for his own comfort at least he must get into some kind of shelter. He found it, at last, after painful crawling and hunchings, on the sheltered side of the cabin close to the wall. Here the wind didn't strike and only an occasional raindrop fell on him.

He waited impatiently from one lightning flash to another until, his eyes attempting to pierce the mountain gloom, he became aware of another light.

In fact, of many lights, a procession of them moving along, away off in the distance. Perhaps on another mountain top, Jerry thought to himself, and then of a sudden a flash of understanding came to him, as thrilling and as all revealing as nature's own lightning.

The moving lights he saw away in the distance were automobile headlights moving along on a far-away highway.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

SINCE MOST designers go to the garden for their motifs and colors, we might just as well go there ourselves and use the original blossoms in our decorations. Nothing adds such charm and brightness to a room as fresh flowers . . . and nothing adds more interest than to change their patterns often. I know one lady who does this with quite a system. Her living room has pale blue walls, an Oriental rug with lots of deep red in it, and the furniture coverings are in deep beiges, ivory and deeper blues and reds. The draperies are ivory satin over ivory ninon. She uses fresh flowers in gradations from pale pinks to deep reds to finish off the color scheme of the room. And she even grows special pots of flowers in these colors and tries to vary them so that she has something in season all the time. Then, too, just as soon as one pot of flowers begins to get dry looking and faded, she replaces it with a fresh one, then takes the faded one out to her sunny spot in the garden and nurses it back to bloom again.

You can't imagine what life and beauty this system brings to the living room. Sometimes she has all lighter pink flowers here and there about the room . . . they're lovely with the pale blue and deep red and ivory. Sometimes she has all dark red flowers in the room . . . sometimes she uses all deeper pink . . .sometimes she uses a few of each color. Of course in season she often has vases of cut flowers as well as the pots, but there is always the part of the year when she can't have fresh cut flowers but can have potted flowers of delicious home grown varieties.

PartyHonors Considines, Here on Trip

Motion Picture Director and Ex-Actress Wife Start Vacation.

Many Officials Attend Affair Given by J. F. T. O'Connor.

Mr. and Mrs. John Considine, jr., who were honored guests at the cocktail party given at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday afternoon by Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor, are on their first trip since their honeymoon. Mr. Considine, noted motion-picture director, and his wife, the former Carmen Pantages, are leaving this morning for New York and sail May 12 aboard the Normandy for England.

Their two children, Erin Valerie, aged 2½ years, and John William 3d, 15 months, are remaining at home in Beverley Hills, Calif.

"You must not start me talking about them, for it is hard to stop," Mrs. Considine told one of the guests who inquired about her young son and daughter. "Erin Valerie has dark eyes and hair and eyelashes 2 inches long—and really that is not exaggerating. John William looks like his daddy."

Dressed in Black.

Mrs. Considine, a petite person with dark hair and eyes and lashes which fit her description of those of her daughter, was dressed in black with a small black hat, a black sequin jacket, high necked and close fitting at the waist, with a black skirt of three-quarter length. She wore also a spray of small white orchids on one shoulder.

This is her first visit to Washington and she was enthusiastic over the beauty of the Capital, especially its trees.

Three Senators, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator Augustine Lonergan and Senator George L. Radcliffe, comprised a group talking to her at one time during the afternoon. Senator William G. McAdoo and Mrs. McAdoo were there, Mrs. McAdoo coming without a hat, with the informality of a neighbor, as they also reside at the Shoreham.

Recent Pictures.

Among other guests were the General Counsel of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Mrs. James B. Alley, Mrs. Harry Baxter, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Senator and Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys, Senator and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, the Assistant Attorney General, Mr. John Dickinson; Dr. and Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs, Dr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price, the Assistant Secretary of Labor, Mr. Turner Battle.

The Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring, Mr. Marvin Hunter McIntyre, Miss Mary Cowles, Senator Key Pittman, the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Robert Fleming, Senator and Mrs. Robert J. Bulkley, Senator Sherman Minton, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Kramer, Mrs. Robert Imbrie, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meem, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Gravem, Mr. T. B. Gravem, Representative and Mrs. Charles J. Colden, Represetnative and Mrs. Walter Disney.

Mr. Considine's most recent pictures are "Broadway Melody of 1936," "Robin Hood of El Dorado" and "The Voice of Bugle Anne." Now, after four years of steady work, he is off on a vacation.

Many Portraits Of Capital Folk To Be Displayed

Jay Jacobs Will Exhibit Work at MacKay Home Today.

Among the portraits of Washingtonians on exhibition will be those of Mrs. Price Whitaker, Capt. and Mrs. John R. Edie and the latter's daughter, Mrs. Robert M. 'Hands Off' Policy Stand Is Reversed

Junior League Session Alters Discussion Rule.

In a complete reversal of the "hands-off" policy adopted at the Toronto conference in 1934, delegates to the conference of Junior Leagues of America, now meeting in Richmond, Va., have announced member leagues may participate to a limited degree in legislative and controversial matters. Tomorrow the delegates will decide how far such participation may go.

Many members of the league have complained its "hands-off" policy has been too severe and the league has been prevented from effective participation in some projects in which members were interested.

Dr. George Vincent, former director of the Rockefeller Foundation, urged Junior League members, at a luncheon Tuesday, to enter into community projects with enthusiasm and in no spirit of condescension.

Yesterday regional meetings were followed by a luncheon at the Country Club of Virginia and regional dinners in private homes.

Mr. Brown's father is managing editor of the Providence Journal, and at one time was engaged in newspaper work in the Capital. The engagement of Mr. Brown to Miss Margaret Durkee, of Bronxville, N. Y., also a student at the Columbia School of Journalism, was announced last month.

Politics Hurt Health Work, White Says

Head of St. Elizabeths Cites Preferences in Appointments.

Exhibit on Birth Control at Medical Society Withdrawn.

Divorcement of politicis from the administration of health departments and a closer alliance between District citizens and their medical society was urged last night by Dr. William A. White, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Dr. White was principal speaker at a public meeting sponsored by the District Medical Society in connection with its annual scientific assembly, which closes tonight with a banquet at the Hotel Mayflower.

"The slowness with which progress takes place in the various departments of health conservation," he said, "is well illustrated by the fact that still largely throughout the United States health officers are appointed to a considerable extent as the result of political preference.

"Only in very recent years has the demand for highly trained, technically qualified men in this field of work been sufficiently widespread to warrant our universities and medical colleges in creating courses especially designed for preparing men for a life work as public health officers."

He praised the 119-year record of the District Medical Society and recommended strengthening the alliance "between the citizenry of the District and Medical Society whereby an enlightened public opinion will seek scientific and professional leadership."

Display Controversy.

Difference of opinion within the society over the demonstration of contraceptive devices flared into the open as the scientific assembly got underway yesterday when an exhibit sponsored by Dr. Walter R. Stokes, a local practitioner, was abruptly withdrawn.

"Materials and Technics of Contraceptive Practice" is the way the display, one of 23 put up in the Medical Society building, was described in the conference program. It was taken down less than two hours after the exhibition opened, upon advice of Dr. Sterling Ruffin, president of the medical organization.

Last night, at a special meeting of the society's executive committee, it was decided to make the withdrawal permanent "without prejudice."

Dr. Stokes agreed to remove his display. He spent the remainder of the day obtaining legal opinions from the solicitor of the Postoffice Department, the Department of Justice and the United States Attorney's office.

Exhibit Legal.

Both Drs. Stokes and Ruffin asserted the exhibit, in their opinions, was legal, but agreed upon the wisdom of dropping the present case pending action by the American Medical Association next week on the general problem of birth-control information.

Present methods of treating cancer of the large bowel are capable of curing 60 per cent of the cases, delegates at the afternoon session were told by Dr. William Wayne Babcock, professor of surgery at Temple University. He cited an increase in the incidence of this type of cancer and said that diagnosis, which is relatively simple, should be sought early.

Invention of a new type of obstetric forceps which may reduce the death toll of mothers and infants in childbirth was reported to the assembly by Dr. J. Bay Jacobs, of Washington.

A 12-point program for a public campaign against syphilis was outlined by Dr. Charles Walter Clarke, of New York. These steps include public health education, availability of treatment (including adequate hospitalization facilities), keeping private practitioners abreast of diagnostic and therapeutic advances, free diagnostic service for private doctors, assistance on cost of medication where necessary.

Guest speaker at a delegates' luncheon at the Hotel Mayflower, Hugh H. Clegg, assistant to J. Edgar Hoover, urged the assembled physicians and surgeons to co-operate with the Federal Government in its crime war by being constantly on the lookout for fugitives seeking medical attention.

Hugh H. Clegg, assistant to the chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, yesterday told physicians assembled here how they may help in the apprehension of public enemies. District Budget Group Studies New Tax Rate

Only General Issues of Supply Bill Discussed at Secret Parleys.

Senate and House conferees on the District supply bill held two parleys yesterday, morning and afternoon, and then announced that they had discussed the issues only in general terms without reaching any of the specific amendments.

The conference was conducted with strict secrecy and members declined to disclose the nature of the discussions.

Senator Carter Glass, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, emerged from the parley smiling broadly, but declined to answer questions pertaining to his feud with Representative Thomas L. Blanton.

The Texan, looking a bit nonplussed and loaded with documentary material, was likewise noncommittal.

"We took off the boxing gloves early," joked Representative Ditter, only Republican House conferee, "and nobody went down for the count of ten, but several didn't get up until the count of three or four."

It is understood that the District tax rate in comparison with that of other cities was discussed at length as the House conferees argued for retention of the $3,000,000 slash in the Federal lump sum payment.

No agreements were reached, it was said, and the conferees adjourned, subject to call by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahome. Another meeting probably will be held today.

Because of the controversial issues, including the lump sum, the character education appropriation, the limitation on outside work to District employes, and general Senate restoration of appropriations to Budget Bureau figures, the parleys are likely to last a week or more, at least.

Drowning Woman Rescued by Boys Motoring in Park

Three youths driving along the Speedway in East Potomac Park last night rescued Mrs. Dorothy Nichols, 34, of 1515 Park road northwest, from drowning in the Potomac.

The boys, Charles Florence, of 340 Charles Court northwest; Fred Edwards, of 1751 Kilbourne street northwest, and Andrew Jasperides, of Fort Myer, Va., said they saw the woman hurl herself from the seawall into the river.

Rushing to the scene, they managed to haul the woman to safety from the seawall. She was taken to Emergency Hospital, where she was treated for shock and immersion.

Friends Honor Senator Killed In Plane Crash

Death of Cutting Commemorated at Dinner by Congress Group.

Friends of the late Bronson Cutting, Senator from New Mexico, killed in an airplane crash a year ago, met last night to commemorate the anniversary of his death with a dinner and discussion. The gathering was held in the private dining room of the Brookings Institution.

In a written tribute read at the meeting, William Allen White, noted publisher, said of Cutting: "His personality was so vivid, the impetus he gave good things was so vital, that he seems to be with us even now."

A letter from Mayor La Guardia of New York City lauded Senator Cutting's "enviable record for vision, progressiveness and courage to see a thing through."

Dr. Edwin Borchard, of Yale University, wrote that "Bronson Cutting symbolizes the hope of America's future. So long as men of his character and selfless devotion to the public interest can be persuaded to offer themselves for public service, there is hope in our future."

At a round-table discussion a subject was considered that was of great interest to Senator Cutting: Methods of combatting the forces that obstruct representative government. The obstructive forces mentioned included parliamentary red tape, party control and personal partisanship, absence of research facilities and subservience to control by special interests.

Ffteen members of the Senate and House were present. It is planned to hold a similar gathering on each anniversary of Senator Cutting's death.

Chester Davis Given Audience With Pope

Vatican City, May 6 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XI today granted special audience to Chester Davis and his wife, of Washington, D. C.

Bean Confesses Role in $25,000 Bank Robbery

Held for Federal Grand Jury in Woodbridge-Langdon Holdup.

Charles Thornton (Doc) Bean, alias Charles Ash, pleaded guilty yesterday when arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on a charge of robbing the Woodridge-Langdon Bank of nearly $25,000 in 1932.

Bean was returned here from New York City last week. He readily admitted taking part in the robbery during which four employes of the bank were forced into the basement while the bandits looted the vaults.

Bean was indicted by the grand jury in 1932 for his part in the robbery. He was held under $20,000 bond by Commissioner Turnage. He was remanded to District Jail in default of bail.

Arrested several weeks ago in a Greenwich Village opium den, Bean was charged with violating the concealed weapon law and a narcotic charge. New York waived custody so that he might be tried here.

Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass yesterday said Bean had admitted hijacking the El Salvadoran Legation here in 1931 and firing several shots at Don Carlos Leiva, Minister of Salvador. Police said Bean named the men who participated in the job with him. Bean was not charged with the legation robbery. Brass said that Leiva could not be located to appear in court as a complaining witness.

Before his arraignment yesterday, Bean was questioned for several days in connection with the murder of Jack Cunningham, bootlegger and police informer who was shot to death as he entered his home in the 1400 block I street northwest in 1931. Cunningham is alleged to have been killed after he had given police information in regard to the hijacking of the legation.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson said there was insufficient evidence to charge Bean with the murder.

U. S. Funds Sought For Garden Plots

Still seeking Government assistance in the furnishing of labor and tools for plowing, the subsistence garden committee of the Council of Social Agencies yesterday announced that 340 plots for prospective subsistence gardeners have been obtained.

Through the efforts of W. R. Beattie, Federal horticulturist, the Agriculture Department has donated an area in Benning large enough to develop 200 gardens to provide fresh vegetables for needy families, said J. A. Nolan, committee secretary. Funds are lacking, however, for tools, seed and workmen to plow the tract.

Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, chairman of the garden committee, had hoped to obtain WPA funds for the project. Subsistence gardening is considered a relief, rather than a works project, and therefore is ineligible for inclusion in the WPA program.

A garden tract also has been donated by Christian Heurich, but lack of funds is hampering its development, Nolan declared.

President to Present Medal To Capt. Samuel Parker Today

Capt. Samuel I. Parker of the Infantry Reserve of Atlanta, Ga., a World War hero and brother of Judge John J. Parker, whose nomination as a justice of the Supreme Court was rejected by the Senate, will be given a Congressional medal of honor today by President Roosevelt.

The medal, the 100th such decoration by Congress for heroism during the last war is being awarded for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity" in action near Soissons, France, on July 18 and 19, 1918.

During an attack, the flank of the battalion in which Capt. Parker was serving as second lieutenant became exposed to a devastating fire from German machine guns nested in a rock quarry on high ground. Parker led his depleted platoon and a few disorganized French colonial troops in an attack on the machine gun nest, capturing 6 guns and 40 prisoners.

The next day while commanding the remnants of two battalions in a further attack he was wounded. Refusing to be evacuated, he continued to lead the attack although part of the time he was unable to walk and had to crawl.

Hazen to Ask Rule to Ban Jaywalking

Meeting of Commission Tomorrow to Receive Request for Action.

Navy Yard Aid Killed in Maryland Accident; 2 Children Hurt.

These were traffic developments and happenings yesterday:

District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen announced that he would ask approval of the proposed ban on jay walking at tomorrow's meeting of the Board of Commissioners.

Irving Schenick, 22, a Navy Yard worker, of 1200 Randolph street northeast, was killed when the car in which he was riding smashed into a tree near Landover, Md.

Two small children were in serious condition from injuries received when struck by automobiles.

A street car motorman, Byron M. Mayer, 27, of the 300 block of Fourteenth place northeast, was arrested on a reckless driving charge after his car, alleged to have been speeding 40 miles an hour down Rhode Island avenue, crashed into a truck.

One auto operator's permit was revoked and 12 others suspended from 15 to 30 days by the revocations board.

Edmund C. Wood, of 1920 S street northwest, a chemist of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, was arrested at Bethesda, Md., on a charge of driving while under influence of liquor.

Hazen's announcement was made after a conference with William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, in the course of which Van Duzer pointed out the present lack of authority to stop jay walking.

The proposed regulation would prohibit pedestrians crossing streets between intersections or at intersections except on proper traffic signals or directions by a policeman. Violators would be subject to the general punitive provisions of the traffic act. These provide a maximum of 10 days in jail or a fine up to $300 or not more than a year in jail if a fine is not paid.

The regulation would cover the downtown area bounded by New York avenue, Sixth and Fifteenth streets.

Schenick, killed in Maryland, was riding with Clarence Lyons, 22, a clerk in the Treasury Department. Lyons who lives at 909 Massachusetts avenue northwest, was brought to Casualty Hospital, where he was still unconscious last night.

Angelo Pantos, 3, of 815 Third street northwest, was crossing Third street near his home when he was struck by a car driven, police said, by Andy L. Pavis, 24, of Orienta, N. C. At Sibley Hospital his injuries were diagnosed as a fractured skull and lacerations.

While playing in the street near his home, Robert W. Armentrout, 5, of 1130 Fourth street northeast, was hit by a car driven by Othel W. Lamp, of 1211 North Capitol street, police said. He was treated at Casualty Hospital for a possible skull fracture.

Policeman H. T. Sullivan, Twelfth Precinct, arrested Motorman Mayer and charged him with driving while drunk. The charge was changed to reckless driving by Assistant Corporation Counsel George D. Neilson.

Policeman Sullivan was a passenger on the car. He said the car sped through the B. & O. Railroad underpass at high speed and crashed into a truck at Fourth street northeast. The truck, driven by Jack Evans, East Falls Church, Va., in turn struck the automobile of Mrs. Grace M. McKeown, 316 Todd place northeast.

When arraigned before Traffic Court Judge Edward M. Curran, Mayer pleaded not guilty to the charge and demanded a jury trial. He was released in bond of $300.

Wood, the chemist, was arrested by Corporal W. H. Merson and Private E. V. Jones, of the Montgomery County police, who said they stopped him after he nearly collided with their car, parked on the Rockville pike.

John S. Greene, 316 S street northeast, lost his license for speeding 55 miles an hour.

Thirty-day penalties went to Harold E. Boesch, 3801 Warren street northwest, 40 miles; Bartlett F. Bovay, 719 Somerset place northwest, 44 miles; Ernest Buff, jr., Twenty-eighth and M streets northwest, 45 miles; Morris Bugak, 1024 Wisconsin avenue northwest, 36 miles, second offense; Robert M. Closgan, 322 Fourth street northeast, 46 miles; Lenyle H. Cooper, 1301 P street northeast, 40 miles; Claude Hasson, 728½ Twelfth street southeast, 40 miles.

Suspensions of 15 days went to George C. Buiter, 1474 Morris road southeast, 36 miles; Barclay R. Challinger, 2331 Cathedral avenue northwest, 36 miles; Kathleen Davis, 736 Jackson place northwest, 38 miles; Paul J. Donaldson, 4326 Chesapeake, 38 miles; Casca G. Duke, 1216 Gallatin street northwest, 36 miles.

Washington's motorists will gather at the Willard Hotel tonight to watch a professional floor show and try to untangle some of the District's traffic problems.

The occasion will be the meeting of the Keystone Automobile Club.

Juvenile Court Bill Hearings To Open Today

Sponsors Say Plan Would Eliminate Features as Criminal Tribunal.

The Voteless League of Women Voters of the District will present the first witnesses this morning as public hearings open on the Norton juvenile court bill before a House sub-committee in the caucus room of the old House Office Building. The hearing will begin at 10 a. m.

Charles L. Chute, executive director of the National Probation Association, New York City, has been called to Washington by the league to explain the purpose of the bill and the operation of similar laws in New York and other States.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), Oklahoma, chairman of the special sub-committee, said he has asked Juvenile Judge Fay Bentley to appear and to be prepared to answer questions on the practical changes that will be effected in the local juvenile court if the Norton bill is adopted.

The purpose of the bill, according to its sponsors, is to change the court from a criminal tribunal to a chancery court. Its opponents fear that it may grant too great powers to the juvenile judge.

Numerous restrictive amendments have been offered by the District Commissioners and will be considered by the sub-committee.

Mrs. Richard Hogue will be chief witness for the Voteless League of Women Voters, but Mrs. Arthur Altmyer, president of the league, will be present also.

John Laskey, former United States attorney for the District, will explain the bill in detail. He was one of its drafters.

White Speaker At Bar Group's Final Session

Lawyers Close 3 Parleys Here, Prepare for 4th Starting Today.

Lawyers of Washington and the Nation closed three meetings here yesterday and made ready today for the fourth.

Members of the American Bar Association met at the Mayflower Hotel to hear an address by Senator Wallace H. White, jr., of Maine.

The American Branch of the International Law Association held its annual dinner last night at the University Club.

The third of the barristers' meetings yesterday was the American Judicature Society's annual dinner.

Convention Today.

The American Institute of Law will hold the first meeting of a three-day convention today at the Mayflower, with Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes as featured speaker.

"Utility of Comparative Law in Drafting National Legislation and Treaties," and "Treaties Regarding Communications and Radio Broadcasting," were discussed yesterday by those who gathered at the American Bar Association meeting, attended also by members of the American Foreign Law Association.

In his speech before the two organizations, Senator White declared that new developments in the fields of wireless and radio have opened more complicated phases to international law. Much difficulty lies, he explained, with making local laws conform to universal ones.

Impeachment Discussed.

Representative Sam Hobbs, manager for the House in the impeachment of Judge H. L. Ritter, discussed the trial at last night's session of the Judicature Society, which yesterday afternoon elected officers as follows:

President, Newton D. Baker; vice presidents, Charles R. Clark, dean of the Yale School of Law; Elihu Root, jr., of New York; Carl B. Rix, Milwaukee, and Senator Frederick Van Nuys, of Indianapolis; chairman of the board, Charles M. Goodwin, and secretary-treasurer, Herbert Harley, of Ann Arbor, Mich.

Speaker at the International Law Association's meeting was Dr. Stanley M. Hornbeck, chief of the Division of Far Eastern Affairs for the State Department.

In Maryland there are 1,235 vacancies and in Virginia 372.

Baptists Hit Legal Gaming For District

Law Enforcement Stand of Garnett Lauded at Session.

Demoralizing Influence of Intemperance Is Condemned.

Vigorous resolutions against "proposals now prevalent with respect to the legalizing of gambling in any form in the District of Columbia" were adopted by the Columbia Association of Baptist Churches at its fifty-ninth meeting yesterday in the Fifth Baptist Church. The resolution further declared:

"That we commend wholeheartedly the position taken by United States District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett in upholding the laws of the District with respect to gambling, regardless of whether the beneficiaries are churches, fraternal organizations, or others; and be it further "Resolved, That a copy be sent to District Attorney Garnett with the assurance that the churches constituting the Columbia Association of Baptist Churches stand uncompromisingly for both law observance and law enforcement."

The "demoralizing influence of intemperance" was condemned in another resolution, with members of the association pledging themselves "to do everything we lawfully and honorably can to overthrow the legalized liquor traffic and overcome the deplorable conditions for which this traffic is directly responsible." The resolution particularly condemned methods which "suggest drinking to women and youth." Improper literature and indecent exhibitions were censured in another resolution.

Appreciation to the press was expressed in another resolution "for its courteous treatment and for the space given in their columns to the proceedings of the association."

An enrollment of 18,555 in the Baptist Sunday Schools of the District, the largest in its history, was reported at the closing session last night in a report by T. Carlisle Crump, chairman of the committee on Bible school work. He reported that most of the new members taken into the churches by baptism during the past year had come from the Sunday School, in eight of the churches all of them.

The Rev. Glenn B. Faucett, chairman of the B. Y. P. U. committee, declared that this organization "has established itself as one of the efficient units of the association," adding that the committee "looks upon these groups as a vital part of our associational life."

Raleigh Employes Plan Credit Union

Employes of the Raleigh Haberdashers yesterday voted unanimously to inaugurate and operate a Federal Credit Union—a "co-operative organization, for the purpose of promoting thrift" among its members and "creating a source of credit" among them.

The employes also elected officers for the union as follow: President William H. Booker; vice president, Isadore Lebow; secretary, Ralph Arnold; treasurer, Miss Betty Hill; director, Miss Mary Sokolsky.

Selected to the credit committee were Miss Ruth Adams Robinson, Frank Berman, William Treakle. Officers of the supervisory committee named were Miss Florence Knowles, Richard Kreuger and Jones Showalter.

Franklin National Depositors Paid

The Franklin Liquidating Trust began payment of a second dividend to depositors of the closed Franklin National Bank yesterday from special offices at Tenth street and G place northwest.

The first dividend to depositors was 65 per cent paid through the City Bank of Washington, which had taken over certain assets.

The present dividend totals about $250,000, 8 1-3 per cent of the original deposit, or 25 per cent of amount remaining to credit of the depositors.

Nearly 100 persons had lined up outside the old Washington Savings Bank being used as temporary offices by the Liquidating Trust to collect their checks when secretary Samuel M. Thrift opened the doors

Tigers Held To 3 Hits by Pearson

Yankee Hurler Also Drives in 4 Runs in 14-3 Victory.

Triumph Is Pitcher's First Over Detroit; All Yanks Hit.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 6.—Pitching 3-hit ball and aided by 14 hits, three of them home runs, Monte Pearson defeated the Detroit Tigers for the first time in his career today as the New York Yankees walloped the world champions, 14 to 3, in the first clash of the season. Pearson, while with the Indians, had dropped seven decisions to the Tigers.

In addition to holding the Tigers in check, Pearson pounded out a homer and a double to drive in four runs as his part in the Yankee offensive that drove Schoolboy Rowe from the mound with a six-run attack in the first inning. The Yanks continued their bombardment at the expense of Roxie Lawson and were not stopped until Chad Kimsey took the mound in the seventh inning.

Each of the Yankees made at least one hit, with Bill Dickey getting his fourth homer of the season and George Selkirk adding another.

Nicketakis Is Out Rest of Season

The pitching career of Nick Nicketakis, Georgetown's star southpaw, that glowed with brilliant promise at the outset of the season, received a stunning setback yesterday when an old shoulder ailment forced him to retire from the mound in the fifth innings of the game with Navy at Annapolis. He will be lost for the remainder of the season.

Nicketakis, who has been scouted by a half-dozen big league teams and stamped as major-league material, injured his arm pitching in a semi-pro circuit last summer. But it returned to normal after a prolonged lay-off, and he finished out the season with no apparent ill effect. There was no trace of the ailment when he reported at Georgetown for battery practice this spring.

Miller's Pilot Arrives, Pronounces Champ Fit

PETE REILLY.

By Bill McCormick.

Mr. Peter Reilly, the Silver Fox of Sockdom, arrived in Washington yesterday, took a look at his featherweight champion, Freddie Miller, pronounced him fit and ready and ordered the last heavy workout for his charge until he defends his laurels against Pete Sarron at Griffith Stadium next Monday night.

"How much more work do you want him to do today?" asked Trainer Harry Gordon as Miller left the ring after finishing four fast rounds with Chief Sparmate Jose Santos and made his way toward the bags.

"What time will he eat dinner?" Reilly wanted to know.

Gordon looked at his watch. It was then 2:30.

"He will eat about 5:30," Harry said.

"Knock him off sometime before then," Reilly instructed, and Miller was allowed to work 15 rounds—the distance he expects to go against Sarron Monday—before calling it a day.

"Miller is in the shape of his

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

POVICH.

This department last evening cheerily set forth to the Mayflower Hotel, there to dine with Mr. Pete Reilly, manager of Mr. Freddie Miller, the world's featherweight champion, and also to draw from him, perhaps, a bit of his lush pugilistic background.

I reached the Mayflower, but I didn't get to first base with my interview with Mr. Reilly. And my good cheer evaporated like a proverbial snowball in Hades. Because, also there (at the Mayflower, not Hades) was Senator Wild Bill Lyons, who is neither a Senator nor wild, simply some kind of an assistant to Postmaster General James A. Farley.

The Senator, who fancies himself as some kind of a fistic authority, something of a politician and an all-around big shot, is a very good friend of Mr. Reilly's, he'd have you know; is as close to Jack Dempsey as his undershirt, and, in fact, knows a lot of important people.

The Senator, as I was saying, was in our party, or maybe I was in his, I haven't figured that out yet. Anyway, the Senator was there and this department never had a chance with Mr. Reilly, if this department had only known it at the outset. As it was, I wound up with a beautiful history of the Senator's life on the range, his close friendship with every champion from Corbett to Dempsey, his special missions for the Government of the U. S., and his entrance into politics.

With the Senator doing the talking, what I was able to learn from Mr. Reilly isn't worth mentioning. I was just about to find out that Mr. Reilly had managed five world champions when Wild Bill interjected with, "Did I ever tell you about the time——"

I don't know if you're still following me, and it's all getting to be very complex to this department, too. But, actually, the Senator is a very easy gentleman to interview, even if a fellow is not especially intent upon interviewing him.

But enough of these marginal notes. S' help me, if this isn't a pretty close copy of the actual transcript of this department's interview with Mr. Reilly. The quotes are Wild Bill's:

And now, Pete, where did you first meet up with Freddie Miller?

"And here's the watch that Jack Dempsey gave me back on the Coast in 1920. See his picture on it. See where it says 'To My Good Friend, Bill Lyons.' That's a $3,600 timepiece, I'm telling you."

Well, Shirley, it was like this: I had Bat Battalino fighting Miller in Cincinnati almost five years ago. I was managing Bat then, and he knocked this Miller kid down five times. And Miller got right up five times. I liked that about him so I signed——

"And here's one that Freddie Welsh gave me back in 1916 when he was champion. See where it says 'To My Old Pal, Wild Bill.' Those were the days when Welsh and I were just like that and——"

So what happened after you signed Miller, Pete?

Well, I put him in that N. B. A. tournament and he lost to Tommy Paul, but——

"Tommy Paul, sounds like a fellow I used to ride the range with down in Texas. Course, it couldn't be him, but the name sounds like it, and I'm 74 now, Wild Bill is. Yes, sir, I used to ride the range, and didjaknow that I was one of the first two Rough Riders that signed up with Teddy Roosevelt when my old pal, T. R., started his Rough Riders?"

Anyway, Shirley, Frankie Wallace came along and beat Paul for the title and then I put Freddie in with him and he won it from Wallace. After that——

"I always said that a good boxer could beat a good puncher any time and if Jimmy Braddock stands up and fights this Joe Louis like he fought Baer, this Louis ain't going to win that title. I picked Corbett to beat Sullivan, Wild Bill did, and I picked Tunney over Dempsey in both fights.

"And another thing, nobody ever was or still is any closer to Dempsey than old Wild Bill, ain't that right, Pete? But I can't let my good friendship interfere with my good judgment when I'm picking fights. No, sir, I can't."

Who were those other world champions you had, Pete, just to keep the record straight?

Well, Shirley, besides Battalino and Miller, Andre Routis, the French featherweight was mine and so was Jack Delaney, the light-heavyweight champ. And I had a big piece of Max Schmeling before I pulled out of partnership with Mike Jacobs because——

"It was back in 1902, out in Chicago, that Will Hearst peeled 50 $1,000 bills off his roll and said to me: 'Here, Wild Bill, let's start our campaign to win the delegates from Colorado,' and I went down there and launched Hearst's Presidential campaign. Old Wild Bill was quite a figure, even in those days, if I do say it myself."

Who was your best champion, Pete, among 'em all?

That's not tough, Shirley. This boy, Freddie Miller, is the fightingest man I ever did see in any weight. Why——

"Have a cigar on Wild Bill. Here you are, a three-for-a-dollar smoke. Old Wild Bill only uses the best. Did I ever tell you about the time in Mexico City when——"

Gun Club Opens Shooting Today

The Washington Gun Club's big trapshooting party, the annual city championships, will open tomorrow over the club course at Benning, and will be concluded Saturday when the District champion will be crowned. The winner will compete at Vandalia, Ohio, later in the season, in the Grand American.

Today will be devoted to oiling up "shootin' arns" and spraying the premises with buckshot pursuing the swerving clay pigeons. Tomorrow's program will be inaugurated with International Fifty, beginning at 9:30 a. m., with doubles and handicap to follow. The handicap will be at 100 targets at distances ranging from 16 to 24 yards.

Harvard Cuts Yale Off Ring Schedule

By the United Press.

Cambridge, Mass., May 6.—Harvard has severed varsity boxing relations with its ancient rival, Yale, it was disclosed tonight when schedules for the 1936-37 season failed to include a match between the two teams.

Reason for the break was the disputed 4-4 draw which Harvard boxers received in their annual match with Yale at New Haven during the winter.

Cup Retained By American Women

Score Is 4½-4½; Each Team Wins 1 Foursome, Halves 3d.

9 Turbulant Matches for Curtis Cup Played on Wet Course.

By Gayle Talbot,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Gleneagles, Scotland, May 6.—Playing through weather that would keep ducks on the ground, America's women golfers broke even with Great Britain in nine turbulent matches here today and retained the Curtis Cup, first won in 1932 at Wentworth, England, and successfully defended at Chevy Chase, Md., in 1934. The score was America 4½, Great Britain 4½.

As the climax of today's play, Jessie Anderson, a 21-year-old blonde, freckle-faced Scotch girl from nearby Perth, ran down a putt clear across the eighteenth green to beat Mrs. Deona Cheney, Santa Monica, Calif., 1 up, and draw her side even with the Americans.

Each team won one foursome match and halved the third. Each won three singles, half of which were decided by one-hole margins. Golf gets no more exciting than that.

When Miss Anderson, who was playing her home course, squinted at Mrs. Cheney's ball, which lay almost dead in her line on the eighteenth green, then stroked the ball into the cup, the Scottish crowd of some 5,000 raised a cry that almost dispelled the mist which hung thick over the Kings course. They virtually mobbed Jessie before she found shelter in the clubhouse.

When, an hour after the finish, Norman Boase, captain of the Royal and Ancient Club of St. Andrews, presented the Curtis Cup, he insisted that Capt. Glenna Collett Vare, of the American team, and Doris Elaine Chambers, nonplaying captain of the British side, each hold one side of the trophy.

"Nothing else would be proper after a match like you girls played today," he said.

The mug, nevertheless, will return to America with Mrs. Vare and her colleagues after the British Women's championship at Southport.

Patty Berg, Mrs. Hill Fade.

Patty, suffering a severe attack of stage fright and admittedly so nervous she could scarcely see the hole when putting, managed to break even in the foursomes, thanks to some heroic work by Mrs. Vare. The cheery little red-haired girl was half-beaten, though, when she teed off against Mrs. Helen Holm, the former British women's champion from Troon, in the singles.

After losing the first two holes in the afternoon, she never had a chance, for Mrs. Holm played superb golf and hit the turn in 37, two under par. Patty was three down at that stage and she finally lost, 4 and 3.

She said, plaintively, at the finish, "You don't know how it is playing away from home for the first time." She was obviously distressed about letting down Mrs. Vare, whom she idolizes.

Mrs. Hill Ailing.

Mrs. Hill, playing with Charlotte Glutting, South Orange, N. J., in the foursomes, failed to play anything like her usual golf. Miss Anderson and Mrs. Holm beat them 3 and 2. In the singles, Mrs. Hill's play was worse and she lost to Mrs. Marjorie Ross Garon, the 1935 English ladies' closed champion, 7 and 5.

From the time she arrived here, Mrs. Hill has been struggling with an annoying case of influenza, and it was clear today that she had not yet conquered it.

The match between Mrs. Vare, U. S. Women's champion, and Wanda Morgan, the British champ, drew the crowd of the day, and though Mrs. Vare did not play spectacular golf, she had the shots when she needed them to win, 3 and 2.

Miss Morgan managed to get back to even terms by winning the tenth, but she dropped the twelfth and the fourteenth to Mrs. Vare's par fours, and she lost the match at the short sixteenth, where she scrambled and took a five.

Thirty-Three Enter Open Golf Test

16 District Players Vie at Hillendale Course Next Monday.

Thirty-three golfers, 6 of whom are from Washington, are entered in the National Open sectional qualifying trials scheduled next Monday at Hillendale Country Club, near Baltimore, according to the pairings and starting times released last night by the United States Golf Association.

Sixteen Baltimoreans are in the field, while one Virginian, Rutt Coffey, of Winchester, also is entered in the 36-hole test.

Six of the participants are amateur golfers. Four of them—Hickman Greene, of Manor; Levi Yoder, of Kenwood; Bobby Brownell, of Manor, and Charlie Pettijohn, of Georgetown University—hail from the District.

Four qualifying places have been awarded the Middle Atlantic district at Hillendale—the same number allotted last season.

The field at Hillendale would have been considerably larger were it not for the fact that a sectional test is being held at the Jefferson-Lakeside Club in Richmond, and that several of the District pros are qualifying elsewhere.

Wiffy Cox, of Kenwood, will seek a place in the Open trials at Hewlett Harbor, Long Island. Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional, will compete at Ponte Vedra course, Jacksonville, Fla., and Mel Shorey will play at the famous Oakmont Country Club course near Pittsburgh, scene of last year's Open championship.

Cox has been paired with Phillips Finlay, New York amateur, and Byron Nelson, of Englewood, N. J.; Mackenzie with John Z. Fletcher, of Ponte Vedra, and Shorey with Bill Carson, Girard, Ohio, and Knox M. Young, jr., Pittsburgh amateur star.

Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam, and Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range professor, who qualified last year at Suburban, are back for another crack, as are the follows other District pros:

Bob Barnett, Al Treder, Walter and Frank Cunningham, Gene Lar-

Friends School Frosh Beat Little Hoyas, 18-4

Behind the airtight pitching of Louis Newmyer, the Friends School freshmen baseball team pounded out an 18-to-4 shellacking over the Georgetown Prep yearlings yesterday at Garrett Park. Jerry Grotle, of the winners, captured batting honors with three hits in three attempts.

Linke Given Drubbing by Chicago

Lyons Scatters 8 Hits, Coasts to Win After Mates Take Lead.

Piet Slams Home Run; Nats' 3 Hits in Third Fail to Bring Run.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

The back-sliding Nats yesterday were fed to the Lyons—Ted Lyons—and accumulated their fourth straight licking at Griffith Stadium, where Mr. Lyons pitched the Chicago to a highly emphatic 5-to-1 victory.

Lyons' share of the glory was the eight-hit ball game that he pitched and the three hits he made with his own bat against some very inexpert pitching by three Washington pitchers.

Manager Bucky Harris attempted to disguise the Nats by replacing the ill Buddy Myer at second base with Red Kress and inserting the left-handed hitters, Johnny Stone and Dee Miles, in the outfield, but the White Sox quickly recognized 'em as the club that had dropped three straight games and didn't tarry long in making it four straight.

After piling up a 4-to-1 lead in the first four innings, they literally drove Ed Linke from the box in the fifth. That was when Zeke Bonura smashed a line drive back into the pitching box against Linke's shin, causing him to leave the game. A severe bruise proved to be the extent of Linke's injury.

Nats Shut Out After First.

The 35-year-old Lyons, who passed his peak as a pitcher five years ago when he was relegated to relief roles, protected that 4-1 lead as if it were something sacred. In fact, he shut the Nats out after the first inning. In fact, he gave 'em only two hits in the last six innings. In fact, in those last six innings, only one of the Washington employes reached second base.

It all began in a very deceiving manner when Dee Miles led off with a double against the right-field fence and the Nats took a 1-0 lead, but the White Sox bounced

Bow and Arrow Steals Show; Double Pays Only $6.20

Short Price Is Believed Record

Roman Soldier Winner of Feature; $91 Paid in 2d Race.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, May 6.—Things happened at this ancient race track this afternoon. The only record set was believed to be a new mark for short prices on daily doubles. Sonny Joe and Bow and Arrow teamed to bring a mere $6.20 mutuel in the twin betting, which generally pays off a hat full.

It was this same Bow and Arrow, the property of Col. E. R. Bradley, which stole the show for the afternoon's racing with a brilliant display of speed. Ridden by Joe Renick, the son of Whichone jogged a mile and 70 yards in 1.45 1-5 to erase all doubts as to whether or not he will start in the Pdeakness.

In the scheduled feature race Roman Soldier, second in the Derby last year, went into action and became an important factor for the Dixie Handicap, scheduled Saturday. Carrying 126 pounds and going the 6-furlong route, Roman Soldier drew away from his rivals in the stretch. After the finish he was worked out a mile and showed impressively.

Bow and Arrow, in the role of a $3.20 favorite, won as Renick pleased and was kept out of trouble all the way. Going to the first turn, Renick purposely steered very wide, circled the leaders going into the backstretch, drew his mount out at the far turn and then jogged him along in front of Rosselli and Knight Warrior.

Roman Soldier, in charge of Jockey Harry Richards, was not asked for speed until the stretch run, and then moved up to draw clear on Trumpery and Accolade. He was running smoothly and apparently well able to shoulder the heavy impost at a longer route. The time of 1:12 1-5 was fair. He paid a surprising $18 mutuel.

Flying Feathers, at a $91.30 mutuel, defeated Syriac by a margin that required the use of the photo finish in the day's steelpechase. It was a thrilling race. Syriac, ruled off of the flat for roguish tactics, was beaten at his own game for he had what appeared to be a decisive lead coming over the last jump.

Flying Feathers, in charge of Jockey G. Walker, was always prominent, but seemed to be hopelessly beaten going to the eleventh fence, for Syriac circled the leaders to draw far out. But Flying Feathers saved ground at the last two jumps and withstood a driving finish. Axework, the favorite, and ridden by Regan McKinney, made a bad landing at the third jump, recovered, but tired the last time around. Great Orex, after almost losing his rider at the seventh fence, did lose him at the thirteenth.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SONNY JOE, $3.40, $2.80, $2.40; NO DICE, $4.90, $4.30; YODEL, $27.30.

SONNY JOE, away well, sprinted into a long lead in the first quarter mile, saved ground all the way, but had to be roused sharply in the last sixteenth to withstand NO DICE. Latter, inclined to lug towards the inside in the early racing, rallied to punishment when straightened into the homestretch and closed with a belated rush. YODEL, slow to settle in his stride, circled his field and finished resolutely. TRIPLE ACTION, prominent from the beginning, held on with good energy in the closing test. DUNNAMANY raced in the first flight while losing ground and could not menace. ARAFI very slow to get into racing stride, came around his field to finish strong. WULFSTAN fell back badly after the first three furlongs. SERAC met with interference rounding the turn. MULVANEY raced green.

SECOND RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Rolling Rock Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:50. Off at 2:51. Winner, A. B. FLYING FEATHERS, racing strongly for the first turn of the field, took command at the ninth fence and, continuing gamely after losing the lead, came again after the last jump to outfinish SYRIAC on the flat. Latter, reserved for the first mile, went to the front after clearing the next to last fence, went into a clear lead at the last jump, but E. Mitchell became over-confident and allowed his mount to loaf, only for which he must have been the winner. SENADO just failed to withstand the winner when challenged. AXEWORK raced in the early part, but saved ground in the late stages and finished gamely. AZEWORK made a bad landing at the ninth fence, was rushed into contention, but had too much taken out of him and he tired in the last half mile. CAPETAN began tiring after the mile. FERRIAN PRINCE could not threaten. AZACAN was unable to find a stride. M. REUDTH came back badly after going a mile and one-half. JACKIE was done early. GREATOREX lost his rider at the final jump.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOW AND ARROW, $3.20, $2.80, $2.30; ROSSELLI, $6.00, $3.30; KNIGHT WARRIOR, $4.50.

BOW AND ARROW followed in close attendance of the leaders until midway of the backstretch, were his opponents down without effort and drew out at his leisure when reaching the homestretch. ROSSELLI improved his position on the outside, rallied nicely in the last five-sixteenths, but could not threaten the winner. KNIGHT WARRIOR, slow to gain his best stride, closed with good speed in the late stages. ANEROID forwardly placed from the beginning and kept showing, failed to rally when the real test came. FOREST PLAY was under urging throughout and had no excuses. ALT went well for six furlongs then stopped. SCUDDER dropped back badly when overhauled.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $6.20.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. The Bowling Brook. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:52. Off at 3:56. Two-dollar mutuels paid—POMPOSITY, $6.40, $4.10, $2.60; INDIAN NEWS, $10.20, $5.00; NAVAL CADET, $4.30.

POMPOSITY, under restraint in the early running while in a contending position and racing on the outside, reached the leaders when entering the homestretch, was forced to the outside when INDIAN NEWS went through on the inside and, after a stiff drive, outfinished the latter. INDIAN NEWS went into an easy lead, was steadied until challenged, bore out at the stretch turn and faltered after being overtaken. NAVAL CADET obtaining racing room on the inside in the last five-sixteenths, but was not good enough in the closing issue. EULER full of run while forcing the pace, was caught in close quarters entering the homestretch and weakened after being pinched back. SUN WAY raced in spots. SAND CLOUD was never dangerous.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROMAN SOLDIER, $18.00, $8.70, $6.40; TRUMPERY, $4.10, $3.40; ACCOLADE, $3.70.

ROMAN SOLDIER, in fine form and full of run while chasing in close attendance of the leaders, engaged the pacemakers when reaching the homestretch, took command when ready and drew out without effort. He was worked out a mile in 1:40 1-5. TRUMPERY stalled off stiff contention from BACHELOR DINNER in the first five furlongs, but could not withstand the winner when challenged. ACCOLADE worked his way into a forward position at the turn, made a wide turn into the homestretch, but held on stoutly. BROWN TWIG saved ground in the late stages after being outrun early, but could not menace. THE HARE was outrun. He was worked out a mile. MANTAGNA left when the start came and was unable to find a stride. He was worked out a mile and one-eighth in 1:54 after closing a good gap. NAUTCH weakened steadily after five furlongs.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGHT PLAY, $6.90, $4.20, $4.00; GOLDEN HIND, $5.30, $4.20; PRINCE TURLEY, $7.70.

NIGHT PLAY, unable to stay with the leaders after the opening quarter mile, responded readily in the final drive, swung to the outside and finished with good courage, was up in the last stride. GOLDEN HIND, displayed nice speed to take command early and, after strong opposition from PRINCE TURLEY in the closing sixteenth, rallied to a hard ride and barely missed lasting long enough. PRINCE TURLEY moved abreast of the pacemakers midway of the turn, made strong efforts and fought it out gamely. TREFORD lacked speed in the early racing and could not menace when improving his position. PATSEY BECONE could not engage the pacemakers. PREVENTION went well for five furlongs, then tired. KENTY showed a good effort and should improve. BALCONY stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. Pimlico Graded Handicap; Class C. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, second. Went to post at 5:31. SINGING HEART, steadied within striking distance of the leaders in the first five furlongs, wore SOBRIETY down midway of the homestretch, was kept under pressure and drew out slowly at the end. SOBRIETY opened up a clear lead in the opening furlongs, stayed around all the way and continued gamely when forced to the outside. APERITIF prominent all the way and hard ridden, weakened during the closing furlong. IRISH TED made his effort in the last five-sixteenths, but failed to threaten. HAYTIME II showed a good effort. HIATUS broke slowly and raced in dull fashion. MAD MAMDI showed a flash of speed in the first three furlongs, then tired. FIPE was always outrun.

FIGHT TALK went into an easy lead going to the first turn, went along under steadying restraint and was never let down. CORUM, slow to get into full stride, worked his way up steadily in the last half mile, but was no match for the winner although easily best of the others. DEEP RUN, on the outside from the beginning, rallied at the final pond, but weakened in the stretch drive. RONFALON passed tiring horses when bettering his position. Wake Forest Nine Is Defeated By George Washington, 5 to 3

The smoothest and most exciting collegiate baseball game played in Washington this season was committed on the East Ellipse diamond yesterday, where George Washington's representatives tacked a 5-3 defeat on Wake Forest.

It took a little more than an hour and a half, together with a four-run uprising in the eighth inning, for the cannonading Colonials to enter another game on the right side of the ledger. In that time the boys did everything but hang the umpire in approved major league style.

For George Washington the defensive of play of Horne, leftfielder; Price, first base, and Stapleton, third base, was outstanding. All three covered themselves with glory, and played important roles in the victory. Of course there is that little matter of Vince De Angelis' six-hit pitching to be considerd. The strapping right-hander was superb, throwing a combination barber-pole and sinker ball that stood the Deacons on their collective noodles.

Carl Snook, of Catoctin Club, Frederick, Md., won the major low net prize in the Maryland State handicap golf tournament yesterday at Kenwood Golf and Country Club, carding 78-8—70.

Snook beat out Eddie Semmler, of Hillendale, by a stroke in the Class A battle. Semmler cracked out a 75, and had a four handicap.

H. D. Samp, of Hillendale, who had a 83-15—68, triumphed in Class B.

The winner in Class C was S. Linderman, who scored 90-18—72.

In the professional sweepstakes Wiffy Cox, host professional, won the prize by virtue of his 71, one over par. Cox went out in 33, one under par, after taking a six on the ninth hole. He had a wobbly 38 coming home.

Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range professor, playing in the same foursome with Cox, was next with 72.

Several of the topnotch District amateurs participated. Volney Burnett, of Indian Spring, carded a 74, playing from scratch, and Levi Yoder, of Kenwood, was around in 76.

Tech Trackmen Beat Md. Frosh

Greatly excelling in the running events, Tech High School triumphed over the Maryland freshmen, 68 to 49, in a dual track meet yesterday afternoon in Byrd Stadium at College Park.

Eastern Downs Md. Frosh, 4-2

Eastern High School's baseball team conquered the Maryland freshmen, 4 to 2, yesterday at College Park, to put an end to the winning ways of the Old Line yearlings, who previously had not lost a game in four starts.

The losers were able to make only four scattered hits off the combined offerings of Stockwell, Hollidge and Penbrook, all of whom took a turn on the rubber for Eastern. Both the young Terps' runs came through the aid of errors.

Charlie Weidinger, Maryland freshman hurler, was thumped for ten bingles, the attack being led by Shortstop Pepper, who made four singles in five trips to the plate.

R.-M. Runners Defeat C. U., American

Yellowjackets Score 13 Points in 3 Final Events to Win.

Staging a super-Garrison finish that netted 14 points in the last three events, Randolph-Macon's track team triumphed over Catholic University and American University yesterday in a three-cornered meet at Brookland. The Yellowjackets hung up a score of 59 to 52 for Catholic and 43 for American.

Johnny Keat led the Virginians to victory, winning the high and low hurdles, and finishing third in the broad jump for a total of 12 points. But it remained for American to supply the outstanding trackman of the afternoon in Bob Hill, who won the century and 220-yard dashes, and placed second in the discus.

Bob McCullough, Cardinal quarter-miler, came through with a surprising victory in his specialty, while Bill Lajousky, who won the shot put, and Bernie Lieb, runner-up in the javelin, helped the cause considerably.

life," Reilly explained. "That is his last heavy workout. From now on he'll taper down, getting into the ring fitter than he has been for many a day."

"This Sarron cannot be taken lightly," Reilly insists. "That's the reason we gave Freddie this long layoff—the longest he has been idle for two years. Sarron's bobbing, weaving and dancing style is a handful for anyone, even a champion, so Freddie had to be right for this one—and he is."

The Silver Fox, generally conceded to be one of the smartest, if not the smartest, managers in the fight business, while admitting that Sarron is a tough job, still refuses to see anyone but Miller winning the important title tussle.

"Sarron is a good fighter, a very good fighter," Reilly admits. "But Freddie is a champion, a very good champion. Barring accidents or phenagling, Miller should win, but not too easily, mind you."

France Raises Rate to Check Gold Outflow

Lifted to 6% From 5 as $25,000,000 Is Shipped to New York.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 6.—The Bank of France today raised its discount rate to 6 per cent from 5 per cent. The raise comes in the midst of foreign exchange assaults on the franc with rumors that the coming leftist government may devaluate the franc.

Marcel Regnier, minister of finance in the present government, announced yesterday that the franc would not be devaluated under Premier Sarraut. Approximately $25,000,000 worth of gold started for New York today on two ships.

The regents of the Bank of France raised the rate in an effort to halt this outward flow of gold which has cut heavily into the gold reserves of the bank in recent weeks.

An emergency meeting of the regents was called after the gold withdrawals were estimated to have touched 500,000,000 francs ($32,900,000) daily on Monday and Tuesday. On those days the extent of the leftist victory in the parliamentary elections of last Sunday became apparent.

Advances on gold bars were raised to 9 per cent from 7 per cent, advances on securities were raised to 8 per cent from 6 per cent, and 30-day advances were raised to 6 per cent from 5 per cent.

The bank decided to raise its discount rate and make gold operations more expensive in an apparent agreement with the government to discourage speculators and to forestall more drastic measures which might lead to depreciation if not to devaluation of the franc.

The bank's gold reserves were reported considerably diminished since April 24 when the bank's statement showed reserves worth 61,937,000,000 francs (about $4,087,842,000). This represents a bank note coverage slightly more than 66 per cent.

Wheat Advanced By Heat and Dust

Chicago, May 6 (AP).—Spurred by reports of high temperatures and dust storms antagonistic to crop welfare Southwest, wheat values went strongly upward late today, contrasting with earlier weakness. Helping to stimulate the rise of the wheat market were estimates that yesterday's export business in Canada totaled 2,000,000 bushels, the largest single day's aggregate in some time.

Recovery in Prices Continues in Moderate Trading; Bonds Advance; Wheat Higher.

New York, May 6.—What financial markets lacked in activity they made up in quiet strength. Without any interruption of consequence stocks slowly retraced the backward steps of a week ago and reached their best prices in the last hour, when the favorites were quoted 1 to 3 points higher. Bonds hardened with stocks. September wheat rose ¾ of a cent to 86½ cents a bushel.

Best gains in stocks were made by the steels and the gold miners. Scattered specialties climbed rapidly on moderate trading. Rails turned active and strong at the beginning of the fourth hour, with advances of 1 to 3 points. The Alleghany issues duplicated their gains of yesterday of 1 to 5 points. Fajardo Sugar hardened and Telephone crept forward. A bid and asked quotation was shown on the tape for Manville in the fourth hour at 95@97½, against a previous closing price of 98. Gold Dust was soft. Continental Can worked into new low ground. Colorado Fuel common and preferred were lower.

Dome Mines made a new high price in the gold group. Homestake rose more than two dozen points on one sale. Smelters was buoyant. Delaware & Hudson, New York Central, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania and Great Northern led the rails. Oil stocks improved. Standard of Jersey, Indiana, Shell Union and Texas rose a point or so. Motor shares were narrow.

Inflation Hopes.

Activity and strength in the mining division of stocks—notably the silver and gold shares—reflects to a large extent the precarious hold which France, Holland and Switzerland have on the gold standard. France's gold supply still is ample to maintain the franc for a long time, but the hoarding in the country and the export of gold suggest that the main question in the problem is one of time. It is not a foregone conclusion nevertheless that France will devalue the franc, for hoarding and probably the export of capital could stop quickly with a restoration of confidence in the new Government that will follow the latest elections.

Meanwhile, the Bank of France, with a management opposed to devaluation, is taking the classical means of stopping the gold outflow. The discount rate was lifted today to 6 per cent from 5 per cent, but changes in discount rates usually are of more effect in adjusting price differences as between countries than in halting a rush to escape loss on fear of currency devaluation.

Outlook for Dollar.

Metal markets presumably suppose that, were France and the lesser countries still on gold to abandon the standard, more spirited bidding for gold might take place in the world market, as a central bank hedge against inflation; and that possibly also this country and Great Britain might lift the paper currency value of gold and silver. One thing may be counted upon: President Roosevelt is highly unlikely to risk his chance of re-election through a fresh devaluation of the dollar before November.

Industrial stocks were strong in spite of midweek news of a somewhat less favorable character. Steel trade reviews suggested that the industry had passed its spring peak of activity, but looked for this month to bring about as much business as last month. At any rate, the industrial leader—United States Steel—was buoyant and reached the best price since the recovery from the market sickness began.

Railroads Improving.

Production of electricity last week was slightly under that of the preceding week, but it was well above a year ago. Railroad freight car loadings last week, according to reports of leading carriers, increased over the preceding week and were 18 per cent higher than for the corresponding period of last year, when higher rates brought a slump. That sustained improvement in railroad traffic helped to sweeten the pill of the March earnings results. In that month, in spite of an increase of nearly 10 per cent in gross revenues, the railroads reported a fall of 8 per cent in net railway operating income.

The difficulty lay in high operating expenses because of floods and should not apply to April earnings, reports of which will appear shortly, nor to the current month. Real improvement has been made in the position of the railroads, for their net income for the first quarter was 21 per cent higher than a year ago. However, that should not obscure the fact that a return to prosperity is not possible until something fundamental is done in the way of regulating competition, reducing labor expenses and consolidating systems.

Stock Issues.

Continental Can Co. rights for the new stock will be worth about 75 cents on the basis of last night's closing price of 72 for the stock. Rights give the privilege of subscribing to additional stock at 60, at the rate of one new share for each 15 shares held. . . . Consolidated Textile common shares have little discernible value under the reorganization plan. The plan gives the old stock a new class C issue with right to buy class B at prices which look to be unattractive for a long time. Heavy liquidation of Consolidated Textile began with the mailing on Monday of the reorganization plan to the shareholders. The Stock Exchange's policy of retaining on its list a receivership stock until the last penny of value has been squeezed out has made possible this final dumping. . . . It is about time the Stock Exchange faced the matter squarely and decided exactly how far it ought to go in protecting existing security holders as against the rights of prospective buyers of securities of companies in difficulties. The present practice is to give prospective purchasers no protection.

Shorts.

If anything happens to upset the applecart of the short interest in French francs there will be some excitement for a while. In foreign exchange circles it was observed that some of the big speculators for the decline were hanging on only by their eyelids and the situation was believed ripe for severe punishment to be visited upon them. The price of franc futures indicated how expensive it would be to maintain short positions which were about to mature.

Curb Approves SEC Control of Unlisted Deals

Value of Securities Not Listed Reaches Total of 7 Billions.

By the Associated Press.

Government supervision of trading in unlisted securities and registration of brokers and dealers in over-the-counter trading was approved yesterday by the New York Curb Exchange.

In brief House Interstate Commerce Committee hearings on the Senate-approved bill to continue unlisted trading after May 31, William A. Lockwood, general counsel of the New York Curb, stated its position in a sentence.

"The New York Curb Exchange feels," he said, "that this bill meets the problem in an intelligent and constructive manner."

Most of the unlisted trading is on the curb.

His statement followed testimony by Chairman James M. Landis, who said the Securities Commission felt it advisable to accomplish gradually the process of bringing over-the-counter securities under the regulatory agency—perhaps with 10 or 15 years necessary to reach a status of supervision comparable with listed securities. Landis said there were some 1,800,000,000 shares of unlisted stocks aggregating $7,000,000,000.

"The commission felt," he explained, "the way to handle the problem was not to admit ad lib further unlisted securities, and by encouraging listing, the unlisted departments on the exchanges would go out of existence in a period of years."

The measure applies to securities that have not been listed anywhere, to those listed on one market and not another, and those not listed but distributed by an issuer, who does have a listed security on an exchange and hence has filed information with the S. E. C.

Landis told the committee that he was agreeable to language that would make it absolutely clear the commission's intent was only to control fraudulent practices in trading in municipal securities and not to have power of regulating such issues.

Robert V. Fleming, president of the American Bankers Association, and Orrin G. Wood, president of the Investment Bankers Association supported Landis' statement of the situation.

Steel Activity Recedes From Spring Peak

Dips to 68 Per Cent But Demand Is Well Sustained.

New York, May 6.—"Spring activity in the steel industry has finally passed its peak," says the Iron Age in its weekly summary today. "After having been maintained at just under the 70 per cent level for the last half of April, ingot output this week has registered the first incline since mid-March floods and is one point lower at 68 per cent of capacity. However, no precipitate drop is in prospect. Demand is well sustained in most directions and there is no reason to believe that May output will be much under the April total, which was the largest in nearly six years.

"This prediction is borne out by the current high rate of blast furnace activity. April pig iron production was at a rate of 80,123 tons daily, a 22 per cent gain over the March rate of 65,816 tons, and 144 stacks were making 90,105 tons daily on May 1, compared with 126 furnaces producing 68,395 tons daily one month before. Eighteen stacks were brought in during April, and current output is at the best level since June, 1930.

"The almost inevitable summer slump is forecast, however, by the trend of scrap quotations. The Iron Age composite price of No. 1 heavy melting steel has finally broken sharply, a decline of 71 cents a gross ton to $13.93 having been registered. In addition to precipitate drops at Pittsburgh and Chicago, steel-making scrap is quotably lower at Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati and St. Louis.

"Increased consumption of steel for pipe-line construction is a recent market development of importance. A leading producer is actively engaged on a 42,000-ton line for the Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation which was placed a few weeks ago and a number of smaller jobs are being rolled."
